TWO PALACES IN LISBON BLOWN UP, SAYS LATE CABLE

MADRID, Oct. 6.—It is reported that the Necissidades and San Taren royal palaces in Lisbon have been dynamited by the republicans. It is not known whether any lives have been lost.

A dispatch from the British warship at Lisbon this afternoon states positively that King Manuel is at Cintra, and that the Queen Mother is on board the Portuguese royal yacht Amelie.

Fighting between royalists and revolutionists continues throughout Portugal, principally at Oporto and about Lisbon.

It is reported that royal troops in Oporto, who remained loyal to the King's standard, are moving against the revolutionists' army in Lisbon. Two columns of troops are said to have left Oporto today for the south.

A legislative program, including the complete separation of the church from the State, pensions for working people and other social reforms has already been completed by the provisional government of Portugal, according to advices received here by republican leaders to-day.

Formal notification of the establishment of the provisional republican government was sent to all the European chancelleries this afternoon over the signature of Theophyle Braga as President of Portugal.

It is semi-officially stated that the new government has received assurances that France is prepared to recognize the Portuguese republic.

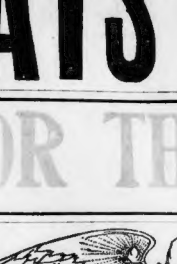
BOY IS KILLED BY TROLLEY CAR

Caught in the trap of a double incline, fourteen-year-old James McKechnie was struck by a trolley car and killed on Parker street while riding his bicycle to Mechanic Arts High School to-day.

McKechnie lived at No. 18 Lawn street, Roxbury. On his bicycle rides to school he usually took a route down Parker street, which grades rapidly down toward Tremont street. At this point Tremont street has a grade down which trolley cars travel with high speed.

The lad came wheeling down Parker street at a fast clip at 8:20 to-day. Just as he reached the corner of Tremont street an inbound Brookline car, with Motorman Thomas Murphy at the controller, shot down Tremont street.



EUGENE N. FOSS.

Our artist shows the Congressman seated at the telephone. Whom can Mr. Foss be listening to? You know he was never more than a "receptive" candidate. Probably he is connected up with Chicago, or Yokohama, or Cohasset. You don't suppose——! What is the number for Faneuil Hall, anyhow?

SOUTH END GROUNDS, Oct. 6.—The last home series of the year for the Doves is on. The Phillies met Boston this afternoon in the first of the series of three games, and seemed to do what the Giants did in their recent stay in the Hub.

It was harder sledding for them, however, as they didn't have the batting aces that the Gotham bunch brought with them.

CITY AUTOMOBILE DESERTED ON BRIDGE

An automobile owned by the water department of this city was found deserted early to-day on Sprague street bridge, Roxbury, by Patrolman Meighan of the Hyde Park police department. The car was a five-passenger gasoline motor vehicle, numbered 3090. Patrolman Meighan first noticed the car at 1:45. On his next tour of his beat at 2:45 he notified the local police station and a man was sent to investigate. It was found that owing to some minor trouble the car would not start. It was towed to the Hyde Park police station.

LA FOLLETTE PASSES OPERATION CRISIS

ROCHESTER, Minn., Oct. 6.—Senator Robert M. La Follette, who underwent a surgical operation on Tuesday, is making rapid progress and his recovery is practically assured. It is safe to say the senator has passed the crisis. He slept well last night and took nourishment early to-day.

DRAPER IS AGAIN NOMINATED FOR GOVERNORSHIP

Eben S. Draper of Hopedale was unanimously nominated for a third term as Governor by the Republican State Convention in Tremont Temple to-day. The full ticket was as follows:

FOR GOVERNOR
Eben S. Draper of Hopedale.
LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR
Louis A. Frothingham of Boston.
SECRETARY OF STATE
William M. Olin of Boston.
TREASURER AND RECEIVER-GENERAL
Elmer A. Stevens of Somerville.
ATTORNY-GENERAL
James M. Swift of Fall River. (to succeed Dana Malone, resigned.)

The convention ran with machine smoothness. The trouble feared from Congressman Butler Ames did not materialize and the nominations and acceptances moved along like clockwork.

A general tone of uneasiness pervaded the Republican State Convention which opened in Tremont Temple at 10:58 today. There was palpable anxiety over the report of the Committee on Resolutions which was to report a platform for the delegates' approval.

The question agitating the delegates was:

What will the committee on resolutions report concerning Senator Lodge and what will Butler Ames do about it if the committee runs in an endorsement of Lodge's candidacy for re-election to the Senate?

Just before the convention opened Butler Ames made this statement:

"I shall await the reading of the platform. If it appears to me that the platform intimates that Senator Lodge ought to be re-elected, I shall move an amendment to strike that out. They can't accuse me of fighting as a Democrat today. Whatever fighting I do will be right here with my own party.

"I shall do what I think is right, and, if they don't like it, they can go to——"

The Congressman paused and concluded with the words "Hannah Cook," as the destination, instead of some other place.

Lodge on Platform.

The convention was scheduled to open at 10:30. But it was nearly a half-hour after that before Chairman Hatfield of the Republican State Committee, as temporary chairman, called the delegates to order.

On the chairman's right sat Senator Lodge. This handy position was accepted by the senior senator after ex-Representative Robert Luce was made permanent chairman. Lodge can things. He whispered advices to the chairman and had his hand on the helm. Congressman Ames sat four chairs from Lodge.

There was an odd hitch when they came to reading the call. This entertaining document should have been read by John A. Curtin of Brookline, secretary of the State Committee. But Curtin was missing. He wasn't on the platform or in the hall or anywhere that earnest messengers could find him.

Wondering, meanwhile, where the regular secretary was, the chair detailed "Charley" Graves, executive secretary of the State Committee, to read the call, which he did forthwith.

Convention Organizes.

In his opening address Temporary Chairman Hatfield called attention to the fact that 180,000 voters failed to cast their ballot last State election. He said that these formed 30 per cent. of the total vote. Furthermore, he said, about 80 per cent of these negligent ones are Republicans. He urged that it wouldn't do to repeat that performance.

The temporary organization was effected in twenty minutes.

The committee on credentials reported 1,155 delegates present out of a possible 1578.

At 10:30 Ex-Representative Luce began his speech of acceptance as permanent chairman.

VAHEY MAKES A PROTEST ON COMMITTEE

The Democratic State Convention got started at Faneuil Hall today more than an hour late. Chairman Macleod callingth e body to order at 12:15. Business had not gone along very far when James H. Vahey complained that he had not been treated squarely in the appointment of a committee on rules, which he declared was a solid Foss body.

Much excitement was caused when it became known that three men forced themselves into the convention hall by climbing through windows. The men could not be picked out, and policemen were stationed at the various windows to prevent the entrance of anybody else in this undignified and burglar-like manner.

HALMIN AND VAHEY IN CONVENTION.

Of the three candidates for the gubernatorial nomination, Curtis S. Hamlin and James H. Vahey were in the convention. Congressman Eugene N. Foss was elsewhere, just where was not divulged.

District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier was made temporary chairman. He made a brief speech, in which he denounced the Payne-Aldrich tariff law. Then the committee on rules appointed. It was at the suggestion of E. Sherry Brown of Brockton that the extra committee—a committee on rules—was appointed. This was regarded as a point in favor of Foss.

The heat in the convention hall was intense. But the delegates were in a good humor. Some one in the hall called for "Sweet Adeline," Mayor Fitzgerald's favorite song, but there was no one who could sing it, the Mayor being absent.

Thayer Permanent Chairman.

John R. Thayer began his as permanent chairman at 1:30. He denounced Republican rule in the State and said Tuttle had been kicked down from the Boston & Maine and Mellen placed on the box, with hotel life by lasting them to lunch.

The actual opening of the convention was preceded by almost a riot in the street as the hundreds of delegates gathered and were halted by the slow process of admission. The crowd in the street took on great proportions as the noon hour approached, and the delegates were being admitted by one narrow doorway, one at a time.

The officials who were to take up the credentials were located at the street door, instead of up a flight at the convention hall door, as they had always been at previous conventions. With the men at the door were several policemen, who were kept busy helping keep the big crowd in order.

One of the first delegates to gain admission was John R. Thayer, the permanent chairman. He said that the crush and the inadequacy of the arrangements to handle the delegates would delay the opening of the convention, which was to have started at 11 o'clock, an hour or more.

A hot fight was presaged in the convention when it became known, just before it opened, that many of the Boston wards had voted in favor of the unit rule at the primaries. In Wards 19 and 22 some of the delegates objected strenuously to this, pointing out that it was just what the public had been promised would not happen. It was declared by some of the delegates that they were threatened with political death if they persisted in their objections and the unit rule was jammed through.

AMERICAN LEAGUE GROUNDS, Washington, Oct. 6.—The Red Sox and the Senators meet this afternoon in a double-header, necessitated by the tie game of yesterday, with both teams prepared to fight it out hard.

The losing streak seems to be broken for the Boston men, who believe that in Washington they have a team that it would be possible to beat. They were stopped only by the merest chance yesterday, and they do not intend to let such a thing happen again.

MILLIONAIRE BOOK PUBLISHER A SUICIDE

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Frank M. Lupton, a millionaire publisher and owner of the Lupton building at No. 23 City Hall place, killed himself in his mansion at No. 829 St. Marks place, Brooklyn, to-day, by cutting his throat with a razor. The cause of Mr. Lupton's act was despondency due to ill health.

9 BOATHOUSES AND 7 BOATS BURNED

LACONIA, N. H., Oct. 6.—Nine boathouses and seven boats were destroyed by a $10,000 fire here. The fire was at Boat House Point on the Lakeport district, a considerable distance out of the town, and for that reason the firemen found it dimcult to fight the flames. The lake steamer Independence was converted into a fireboat and her crew did effective work.

The Mutt and Jeff Cartoons in Book Form

PREFACE

NO book is a regular book without a preface; hence this bundle of junk. A dedication is supposed to give class to a book, and Mutt is always on the job with the classy stuff. Sometimes one starts a preface by exposing the author's real name, but I shall cut that out, for were I to impart my real label, I might get six months for obtaining money under false pretenses.

Books are published for two reasons:

First, to get the author's name into print.

Second, to get money into the author's pocket. (Of course, the publisher gets some, too, but the author is not supposed to know that.)

This book is different. There is only one excuse for putting it before the public—to get the money. (Thank you for buying this one.)

The Mutt and Jeff cartoons have been running daily in the Hearst papers for three years, making a total of close on to one thousand pictures. It can readily be seen that it would be almost impossible to place this entire collection in one book. If such were done, this publication would look like the city directory of Greater New York and a truck would be necessary to move the book from the store to the purchaser's home, which would greatly handicap its sale. Not desiring to put the crusher on the marketing of this flock of gebris, we have been forced to make a selection of a number of the most representative pictures, selected from the various periods of Mutt's career. We give some of Mutt's earlier adventures and end with his most recent, thereby covering the most important events in the life of this eccentric gentleman and his side kick, Little Jeff.

And now if the people who read this crime have as much fun as I did in drawing its contents, I shall be satisfied.

FIGHTING CONTINUES IN PORTUGAL AFTER FALL OF MONARCHY

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The Standard's Madrid correspondent confirms the report that the revolution in Portugal has spread to Oporto. Fighting is still going on in that city. Loyal regiments are reported marching both to Lisbon and Oporto, in the hope of stemming the tide of the rebels' success. One admiral and five generals head the revolt.

A wireless message received at Madrid purports to say that Manuel is a virtual prisoner on board the royal yacht Amelie stated that Manuel is a distant cousin of King George the Queen Mother and the Infante Alfonso and the British monarch has been greatly were on board. No mention was made of interested in the marriage of the King Manuel. It is said that the guns of the Amelie was when the rebels appeared.

A dramatic incident of the day during the pitched battle in the streets was the march of the army of citizens and soldiers to the Liberty avenue against a hotel filled with artillery which had remained faithful to the King. More than 2,000 persons were in the motley multitude that pressed toward the battery. The great esplanade was filled from side to side and despite the rain of missiles from the roofs the mob never faltered.

It had almost reached the muzzles of the cannon when the officers lined up the bravery of the Republicans ceased firing and allowed their guns to be captured.

A provisional republican government today holds sway in Lisbon. Reports from the Portuguese provinces are to the effect that warfare is raging, but that the very influential are steadily subduing the royalists. The exact whereabouts of King Manuel is unknown, one report is to the effect that he is a virtual captive on the cruiser Newcastle. Madrid hears that the King and the Queen Mother Amelie passed through San Sebastian early today on a special train. The general belief in Lisbon seems to be that the entire royal family, the King's mother and his grandmother, Queen Maria Pia, have taken refuge at Mafra, a few miles from the Portuguese capital.

The situation in Spain is reported to be growing more alarming hourly. Alfonso and his advisers are making desperate efforts to forestall revolutionary uprisings in Catalonia. Warships have been placed in all the ports of the southern coast. This means was without quarrel should a reported conspiracy on the part of other various revolutionary factions and the Carlists result in an open attack on the monarchy.

A number of Spanish cavalry is patrolling the Portuguese frontier. Dispatches from Code of the Portuguese provisional government.

A republic has been proclaimed with the overthrow of the power of the church and the people. Provisional government has been established. Numerous messages of congratulation are received from other countries.

Fortune Safe in England.

On the occasion of Manuel's visit to London a month ago it was currently reported that he had come here to obtain consent to his alliance with Patricia. King George is said to be highly in favor of the match, as was in favor of it until Manuel's fickle heart fell a victim to the charms of Princess Ena. Queen Alexandra, however, is said to be highly displeased with the proposed marriage of her niece to a ruler of a country which is in such a state of turmoil as Portugal is at present.

King May Be a Prisoner.

The cruiser Cape Blanco, which arrived at Vigo, Spain, today from Lisbon, reported that King Manuel was held a prisoner at Mafra under guard of the Pioneer of the deposed government on the Braganza battleship Sao Paulo. The Cape Blanco also reported the new warship of the Portuguese navy, the Dom Carlos, which was expected to join the loyal fleet, was overturned by her crew and joined the rebel vessels which hoisted the republican flag.

The Portuguese political leader in Paris, Senor Lima, received the following dispatch today from Minister Costa, head of the Portuguese provisional government:

"A republic has been proclaimed with the overthrow of the power of the church and the people. Provisional government has been established. Numerous messages of congratulation are received from other countries."

Situation Alarms King George.

That King Manuel, the Queen Mother and perhaps other members of the royal family are on board the British cruiser Newcastle speeding towards England is the intelligence in late advices received in this city at noon today. When George, who with the Queen, is at Balmoral, learned of the overthrow of the Portuguese monarchy he sent a flattering telegram and anxiety over the safety of the youthful monarch.

He requested that the latest foreign dispatches be sent to him post haste. King from the royal yacht Amelie stated that Manuel is a distant cousin of King George the Queen Mother and the Infante Alfonso and the British monarch has been greatly interested in the marriage of the King Manuel. It is said that the guns of the Amelie was when the rebels appeared.

Arms Shipped From France.

In the last six months great quantities of arms and ammunition have been shipped

It is known here that within the last fortnight a number of Spanish Republican leaders have gone to Lisbon to aid in the overthrow of Portugal.

A secret is made of the fear in certain governmental quarters that Alfonso's throne is tottering on the brink of revolution, and that a republic may now be hailed in Spain before many days have passed.

Advices were received today by the Portuguese Legation adding details to the story of the overthrow of the monarchy. Some of these are conflicting, but, according to the connected narrative, the story runs as follows:

Fighting has been going on for two days with great bloodshed. King Manuel and the members of his family, who remained loyal, fought nobly. The King and ten officers of regiments held the royal palace against a terrific bombardment from Portuguese warcraft in the harbor. Soldiers with artillery and reinforced with hundreds of peasants attacked the palace by land. Fighting with the bitterness which was seen in the assassination of his father and brother by the same republicans which now were seen attacking the royal edifice, King Manuel's staff stubbornly refused to flee.

Not until the walls began to crumble and fire to consume the palace, which he had depended for support in all battles, did he give up and quench the flames in the streets would the King listen to the advice of counsel who declared that he must give up.

Leaving the palace under the cover of darkness Manuel fled to Cintra, where he was met by the Queen Mother. Later in the day they were conveyed elsewhere, but where was a matter of mystification.

President-elect of Brazil, Marshal Hermes Fonseca, has delayed his departure and remains in Lisbon.

The capital is completely in the hands of the Republicans, who have formed a provisional government, with Theophilo Braga as President. A new national flag of red and green is flying over all the public buildings, including the town hall.

Several Hundred Dead.

It is impossible to estimate the number of killed and wounded in Tuesday's fighting, but it is expected to reach several hundred.

The city has been practically ruined by the bombardment of the insurgent warships. The buildings occupied by the Ministers, among the finest in Lisbon, and the Necessidades Palace, were made the particular targets of shells from the warships, and show the effects by broken walls and turrets. The tower of the church attached to the palace was demolished.

No attack has been made upon private property, and it is reported that the banks are being guarded by bluejackets.

Miss Mabel F. Dawkins, 1214 Lafayette St., Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "For three years I was troubled with catarrh and blood disease. BERLIN, Oct. 6.—A music hall dancer lost King Manuel his throne. . . . e siren in the case is Mlle. Caby Deslys, whose "Jin Jinsi waltz" caught the young monarch's fancy in Paris and threw his heart into a passion of yearning.

The King and Mlle. Deslys were again constant companions. They drove together daily and were apparently devoted to each other. The populace might have overlooked the boy king's attachment for . . . rice if he had not encountered heavy losses in gambling in jewels and costly gowns upon her.

Her slightest wish was gratified, no matter what the cost . . . and this time the people were hungry and wanted work. Labor and financial and financial conditions were such that the commoners were being ground in the dust.

WATER PLENTY; NO CUPS; BIG THIRST RAGES

"Water, water everywhere, but not a drop to drink"—because there isn't any cup from which to drink.

This is the time of the big thirst. Since the new drinking cup law went into force last Saturday the question of the hour is: "Where can I get a drinking cup?"

It's no joke. The new law forbids use of public drinking cups in public buildings, railroads and public places generally. Either a bubble fountain must be used, or private or individual cups must be furnished. That usually means the 5-cent paper cups, which are sold from slot machines at a penny apiece.

Public institutions, railroads and so on took out the public drinking cups quick enough. But most of them didn't do anything to replace the cups.

When F. Augustus Heinze was testifying in his copper stock suit in the Supreme Court here he became thirsty. A court officer hustled for a glass of water. There was water but no glass. The officer bought of half-dozen wax paper cups and Heinze drank till his throat was in speaking condition again.

Passengers on the three railroads entering Massachusetts complain that at the moment the train crosses the State line the drinking cups disappear. They are taking no chances with the new law. Some of the Pullmans have the cup vending machines. But in most of the cars the passengers can stay thirsty all they like after the State.

At the North station some person with mistaken sense of kindness bought an individual paper cup and left it at the drinking fountain, which had been cupless since Saturday. The station master spied the cup and took it away quickly. It would have cost the Boston & Maine $25 if he had not so.

Boston public schools must provide their own drinking cups after Dec. 1, 1911. The School Board has voted to install some new drinking fountains. It would be ready till that date. What will happen to the kid that borrows another kid's private cup is not stated. Maybe the law will punish the teacher.

Meanwhile the vendors of various kinds of liquid refreshment, alcoholic and otherwise, are not complaining.

COURT SEEKS TO DISBAR HEAD IN TENNESSEE

Hon. James M. Head, former mayor of Nashville, Tenn., and now a resident of Brooklinn, has been cited to appear before the Supreme Court of Tennessee to show cause "why his name should not be stricken from the docket as a practicing attorney."

This action adds another chapter to the filling of United States Senator Carmack by the Coopers who were convicted, the senior Cooper being later pardoned by Governor Patterson after the Supreme Court affirmed the sentence.

The offense with which Head is charged appeared in a communication alleged to have been written by Head and published in a Memphis newspaper, charging that a coalition existed in Tennessee between the Supreme Court and certain factions and interests and the further allegations that the Supreme Court would knock out the prohibition law known as the manufacturers' law.

Mr. Head was a practicing attorney in Tennessee before he was elected Mayor of Ohio. He was recently urged to return to oust the Democratic ticket in the coming governorship race when Governor Patterson was forced to refuse the nomination.

$55,000 CASH PURCHASE THE GREATEST RAINCOAT PURCHASE EVER MADE IN BOSTON

WILL BE FOLLOWED TODAY BY THE

GREATEST RAINCOAT SALE EVER KNOWN

Forced out of their prominent location at the corner of Washington and Franklin streets by a new lessee, the managers of the National Raincoat House made every effort to close out their stock of Priestley Cravenette Overcoats, English Slip-Ons and Silk Rubberized Raincoats for men, women and children.

But the task was too big. Their extensive advertising campaign worked wonders—thousands of people flocked to the store—attracted by the unheard-of prices.

Last Friday, the National Raincoat House were forced to close the doors—having about 12,500 garments left, and also the factory lots delayed by the great garment Makers' strike in New York, embracing the finest garments ever offered to the public.

We made them a ridiculous cash offer. It was accepted—an offer so low that it will enable us to sell standard garments for the next few days at less than one-half the cost to manufacture.

We have moved the entire stock to our big store—127 Tremont St.—and the sale commences today.

DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION BATTLE IN FANEUIL HALL

GREAT ENTHUSIASM A MONG THE DELEGATES GATHERING IN HISTORIC "CRADLE."

Chairman Macleod of the Democratic State Committee called the Democratic State Convention to order in Faneuil Hall at 12:45 o'clock. At that time the gallery was jammed. It was impossible to get in the hall. District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier began his speech as the temporary chairman at 1:35.

Candidate Vahey Active.

The various committees were appointed and retired to the anteroom. The first act of the regular program of the convention was with a swing after they got settled down to work.

Many Clamor for Admission.

The first delegate was admitted to the hall at 10:45. At that time there were about 200 men in the anteroom clamoring for admission. The delegates as they arrived were met by Candidate Vahey, who saw to it that the crowd increased on the outside, and there was much pushing and pressing among the belated delegates.

At 11:45 o'clock the delegates were still pouring in. At that time 1,000 had been admitted. The anteroom was filled with the groups talking over the situation and the different candidates. Each one of the groups to the nominations for governor.

The band played.

The anteroom was filled with a dense haze of cigar smoke. Many of the delegates brought their lunch boxes with them. Each set of delegates from each ward in Boston had one for each of the gubernatorial candidates to choose from. The first set of checkers for the state Committee called the Democratic State Convention to order in Faneuil Hall at 12:45 o'clock. At that time the gallery was jammed. It was impossible to get in the hall. District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier began his speech as the temporary chairman at 1:35.

Candidate Vahey Active.

Candidate Vahey was the most active of the three candidates. He was on the floor of the hall and in the anteroom most of the time. He was at the head of the state shaking hands with the delegates and was constantly in touch with the state committee and committee outside the convention hall. Chairman Macleod of the State Committee arrived at the hall about 12:30, and then the corridor was filled with President Maynard of the Democratic City Committee. They talked in low tones, and then Maynard disappeared.

"Well, we know each other pretty well," he remarked to Sonny Mac.

Convention Opens at 12:15.

Chairman Macleod mounted the platform and called the convention to order. Each set of checkers from each ward in Boston had one for each of the gubernatorial candidates to choose from. same game. There was absolutely nothing to stop them from matching Martin and the Joes with another trio, or even half a dozen.

Why Didn't They Mix In?

Why didn't Jim Donovan come down and mix in? Or Joe Donilson? or Jim Doyle? or Congressman Keliher? or "Bill" Clark? or any of them? That's what folks were asking. The question wasn't asked as to Dave Shaw, for the Charlestown man was more in evidence than the rest, and took no effort to conceal his belief that the man to win is a gentleman by the name of Hamlin.

There was no answer to these questions, generally speaking, except the understood belief of Mr. Hamlin's Boston supporters that the more the up-State delegate saw of "Boston" and the present Boston leaders in the Fess campaign the quicker they'd flock to U. S. Hamlin.

There was a number of good stories floating around the Quincy last night and today. Some of them had to do with the Congressional contests.

Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell of the Tenth, for instance, was seen to walk up to Councillor James J. Curley, who recently defeated him for renomination, and "stick out the right hand of fellowship. Mr. Curley grabbed it with no apparent delay.

This historic meeting took place at the foot of the gala staircase to the crowded lobby of the Quincy. It was seen by scores of Democrats. It made a mighty fine impression on most of them and news of it travelled by wireless all over the house.

As to the Ninth District, however, there was a rumor that Congressman John J. Kelliher had quite made up his mind to run as an "independent" against young Murray, and that petitions were already being circulated in Mr. Kelliher's interest. It was even suggested that the Republican Governor in the distinguished General William H. Oakes, might take himself out of the way before long and leave Kelliher right it out alone with his recent victor.

Giblin Somewhat Uncertain.

Thomas J. Giblin of East Boston was also at the hotel. Mr. Giblin was in the race with Kelliher and Murray a while back. He said to some of his friends at the Quincy that he had thought for certain of running independently for Congress, and he had also thought of running for sheriff in that fashion. But he hasn't made up his mind. However, Mr. Giblin expressed his opinion that it ought to be possible for 25 per cent. of the voters of Boston to ask for the recall of their Mayor.

Last night there was a report that Representative William H. O'Brien of Ward 16, Dorchester, had been booked for certain Essex county Democrats if he wouldn't come up there and run for Congress against Mr. Lodge's son-in-law, Augustus Peabody Gardner.

The suggestion was made to Mr. O'Brien in the rooms of the Democratic Club of Essex county Mr. O'Brien seemed to think pretty well of it, and the Essex Dems can have him if they mean business. As a matter of fact, the nomination is again at the disposal of the committee in Newburyport, if Mr. Withington wants it. Last night there was no response.

Nobody in the Essex County Club was telling Mr. O'Brien that he couldn't beat Gardner, but it was said that a Democrat with Mr. O'Brien's political record in the State House, and his wide acquaintance in the district, Mr. O'Brien, as a native of Gloucester—can put up a good campaign and hope to roll up a big vote for the State ticket.

But it wasn't only the head of the State ticket that was up in the air when the convention was rapped to order. There were more candidates, and there was more uncertainty as to second place.

When the last of the hangers-on was bounced from the Quincy House some time after midnight there were seven Democrats more or less in the race for the lieutenant-governor nomination. These seven were Mayor John F. Coughlin of Fall River, former Mayor William P. Hayes of Springfield, Daniel F. Doherty of Westfield, Honorable Theobald M. Cramer of Northampton, Honorable Thomas H. Cassidy of Adams, David I. Walsh of Clinton and Representative Thomas F. Riley of Malden. They all appeared to have their friends and all except Cassidy did some campaigning. Tom Riley of Malden was the only one who opened headquarters.

A Want Advt. is often the road to fortune.

THERE'S CHARLIE
OH! YOU HAMLIN
HAMLIN WAS DOWN TO THE QUINCY HOUSE WITH THE BOYS—AND THEY LISTENED TOO
CHARLES SUMNER HAMLIN.

The way they used to play the game, some back to the starties, Mr. Hamlin wouldn't have known what was going on, and would have been surprised to learn that there was a Hamlin concerned. Under the old rules Charles would down to the Quincy and flocked with the boys, who called him "Charley." Mr. Hamlin seemed to be carrying the newer methods.

LEAGUE VOTES DOWN FUSION IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.
NEW YORK, Oct. 6. For Governor, John J. Hopper of New York.

For Lieutenant-Governor, William Randolph Hearst of New York.

These nominations were made at 3 o'clock this morning by the unbossed Independence League State convention in session at Cooper Union.

The convention had previously voted by an overwhelmingly majority to place a straight State ticket in the field. The remainder of the nominees will be chosen probably before the expiration of the week.

Mr. Hopper and Mr. Hearst were chosen by acclamation, after hours of battling between a proposition for a straight ticket and another to endorse the Republican candidates.

The announcement of their selection was made amid scenes of wild enthusiasm and cries of "Carry them to victory."

When by a vote of 214 to 94 the convention avowed itself in favor of a straight ticket, E. F. O'Loughlin, of Kings, mounted the stage and in an emphatic speech offered John L. Hopper in nomination for governor. His address was frequently waved.

Then Bernard Nolan of the sixth district jumped up and nominated Mr. Hearst for governor. Delegates climbed upon chairs and waved hats and canes, chanted "Hearst! Hearst! Hearst!" Finally Joseph Buchanan, secretary of the convention, managed to make himself heard. He said, "I say with authority that Mr. Hearst would under no circumstances accept a nomination for Governor, though he might for Lieutenant-Governor only for the purpose of defeating the Murphy ticket. I know that Mr. Hearst is unwilling to be placed in the position of seeking office of any kind."

Where does this leave Fitzgerald?

* * *

This man Joseph Walker isn't afraid of the Old Guard.

* * *

The Republican campaign posters "Reelect these men," with photos of Draper and Frothingham beneath, appeared yesterday. The G. O. P. folks had no doubt as to who their candidates would be.

* * *

Another day of loose-tapping by Democratic orators such as was witnessed yesterday would raise the Democratic ticket a handicap.

* * *

Watch out for some vigorous house work in Democratic State headquarters at No. 34 Beacon street.

* * *

If you found things dull at the American House last night, all you had to do was to find real excitement was to walk around the block to the Quincy House. The Republicans held forth at the former, the Democrats at the latter.

* * *

Joe Lomasney has no reason to feel suddenly towards Charles S. Hamlin.

* * *

Did you notice how Fred Macleod stopped posing as a "individual Democrat" and wielded the cudgel for Foss, as chairman of the State Committee?

* * *

Here's the latest blast from Fred Macleod: "Gerry," says Fred, "was not a Republican, then a Democrat, then a Populist, then a Democrat, then an Independence Leaguer, and then a Democrat. And they do say that he is none or less partial to the greenback doctrine."

* * *

Democrats in the Tenth Congressional District will notice the names, boundaries and titles of the delegates from the various wards in the Boston end who attend the State convention of the Democratic party in Faneuil Hall to-day. Many of them favor Ward and Ward men as their choice for the Democratic standard bearer for Governor. If either one does get the nomination there is nowhere ahead" for some of the Democratic office seekers. Representative William H. O'Brien, if Vahey is defeated, will be an independent material Democratic party of the Tenth Congressional District.

Rats and Puffs the Style

Women who cover their heads with masses of false hair will in time have diseased scalps. Rats and puffs are denounced by doctors as unhygienic dust and germ catchers. They exclude the air from the scalp, and the pressure on the delicate network of veins soon results in the loss of hair. A good thing to shampoo the head with is a neutral soap, combined with Glycerin, White of Eggs, Cocoanut Oil and Salicylic Acid. These are the ingredients Birt's Head Wash is made of. It removes every trace of dandruff and scales from the scalp and leaves the hair soft and glossy. 25c, and 50c. at drug and dept. stores.

EDUCATOR RETIRES FROM DARTMOUTH

HANOVER N. H., Oct. 6. — Professor Charles Francis Richardson, Ph. D., the most popular of all Dartmouth professors, and since 1882 Winkley professor of the English language and literature at Dartmouth, has announced his intention to withdraw from the faculty. The resignation goes into effect Commencement day, 1911. Advancing age and the desire to devote his whole time to the pursuit of literature is given in a letter to the Board of Trustees as the reason for the resignation.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 200,000 more than its next highest competitor and 75,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

PORTLAND LOSES GRAIN SHIPMENT

MONTREAL, Oct. 6.—A serious blow to the grain handling possibilities of Portland for this Winter fell when it was discovered at the head offices of the Grand Trunk here, that plans in the West, which had been looked upon as almost complete, had not been carried out, and that it will be another year before the Grand Trunk has opportunity to take part in the grain business. It was arranged with the Canadian Northern to build a loop line down to Winnipeg from the Grand Trunk Pacific main line. This loop has not been built.

Almost everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

C. J. CAPEN LAID TO REST AT DEDHAM

The funeral of Charles J. Capen, who for 53 years taught in the Boston Latin School, was held at the Unitarian Church, Dedham. Teachers of the old school, headed by Henry Pennypacker, headmaster; Mayor John F. Fitzgerald as old pupil, and many others who had known him as teacher, friend and neighbor, attended. The services were of a simple nature, consisting of Scripture reading and prayer, by Rev. William H. Parker, pastor of the church, and eulogy by Rev. W. W. Fenn, dean of Harvard Divinity School. Interment was made at Brookdale cemetery.

SOCIETY AT BIG BROCKTON HORSE SHOW

BROCKTON, Oct. 6.—To-day was "Boston Day" at Brockton's big fair. The most notable thing of the day was the large gathering of the most exclusive society women of Boston, New York, Newport and Long Island, including Eleonora Sears, Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Adolph Ladenburg. Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, popular society matron of Cohasset and Miss Dorothy Forbes were among the most prominent of Boston society women who exhibited in the horse show.

A crush of people that would make a Harvard-Yale football crowd look like a suffragette demonstration swooped through the city on the way to the fair. It seemed that everybody in Boston and surrounding places had closed up shop for the day, grabbed friend, wife and the children by the sleeve, donned a happy-go-lucky expression and "beat it" for the "big fair, the greatest the world has ever known," if the fakirs are to be believed.

Rivalry at Horse Show.

Interest to-day centred around the horse show, the aces and the lower-to-be omitted Claude Grahame-White, who continued to enjoy the large amount of popularity he first acquired at the aviation meet.

Rivalry was intense between the Alfred G. Vanderbilt horses and those owned by F. A. Sorg, also of New York. Yesterday's show Sorg's Vanity Fair won out over Mr. Vanderbilt's Madge and Duke. In spite of the fine driving of Miss Eleonora Sears and Mr. Vanderbilt, who handled them.

Mrs. Adolph Ladenburg, New York's most noted horsewoman, who disappointed the repertoire crowds yesterday, gave an exhibition of her superb riding to-day.

Good critics declare that nothing at Madison Square Garden ever surpassed the showing of the borsebeck which was on parade to-day. Mrs. F. L. Ames of Nor Easton, Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, Spencer Gordon of Fall River and Miss Dorothy Forbes showed their prize winners. Julian Mayo and Arthur White, famous hunters of Virginia, repeated their successes of yesterday in the hunter class.

Clarence Moore, Robert A. Fairbairn and L. E. Waring, the judges elected by the ballot of the exhibitors were all unable to serve at the last moment, but Francis M. Ware, the manager of the fair, was able to secure Dr. A. H. Fitch and Samuel J. Shaw of Boston to judge in the harness classes while E. P. McGrath of Lancaster, Pa., and H. Penn Smith of New York, officiated for the hunters and saddlers as scheduled. McGrath is the most noted harness horseman in the country and is the present owner of the famous hackneys imported by the late D. Jordan.

All After the Money.

The absence of Reginald Vanderbilt on account of illness and of George Watson, who is not an exhibitor this year because of his present bereavement in the loss of his son, George Watson, Jr., also a noted horseman, has occasioned much regret on all sides.

Miss Beatrice Smith, a popular Boston flash into society girl, made an enormously good showing in the saddle classes.

All classes of society were in the great throng that surged back and forth over the grounds all day long.

There's so much to see that if you came every day and stayed all day for the whole four days, there'd still be about four dozen things you still have forgotten to see.

One observing young man was overheard to remark, that the streets at the fair are cleaned just like the streets of Boston. For instance: Some men sweep the dust into little piles; the sun dries it; the wind scatters it; you go home and clean it out of your eyes.

Grahame-White's handgar is the centre of an admiring throng from early morning till the last thing at night. If the rope which keeps the crowd away from his Farman biplane wasn't a strong, reliable sort of a rope, the same Farman biplane wouldn't be in running gear to-day. Enthusiastic aeroplane admirers almost tore him limb from limb, to say nothing of the carnal sort too, in their desire to see the dashing Cantab and his famous machine.

SOMERVILLE WOMAN IS AUTO VICTIM

CLINTON, Oct. 6.—Mrs. Mary Martin, forty-three, of No. 464 Broadway, Somerville, is unconscious and on the dangerous list at the Clinton hospital as a result of injuries received in an automobile accident. The automobile which hit Mrs. Martin was a 60-horse power touring car, owned and operated by Harry A. Irish of the Hotel Bellevue, Boston.

The accident happened at Lancaster, Mrs. Martin had been visiting her daughter at the girls' school and was walking down the road toward the station to catch a train for her home when she was struck.

JOHN D. AT POCANTICO.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 6.—John D. Rockefeller, Mrs. Rockefeller and the latter's sister, Mrs. Spellman, accompanied by a retinue of servants, have gone to the oil king's Pocantico Hills, N. Y., estate.

HUGHES QUITS AS GOVERNOR

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 6.—Governor Hughes turned over the reins of government of the State of New York to Lieutenant Governor Horace White of Syracuse, to-day. He will assume his judicial position as a justice of the United States Supreme Court at once, leaving for Washington to-night. His four years of service as chief executive of the State of New York are now at an end.

The governor before retiring practically disposed of all matters pending before him, including a reorganization of the state forest, fish and game commission, after a report severely criticising the administration of the affairs of that department.

The governor received many callers, who paid their farewell respects. He has received telegrams from all sections of the State congratulating him on his four years' service.

DR. J. MILLER HINSON DIES AT SARATOGA

Word has been received in Boston of the sudden death at Saratoga, N. Y., on Tuesday, of Dr. J. Miller Hinson of 1855 Beacon street, Brookline, who for several years was on the staff of the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital. He was the son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard C. Bliss and the brother-in-law of Elmer-Jared Bliss of Brookline. Dr. Hinson's death resulted from heart trouble, with which he had been afflicted for some time. A Wreck in 1892; Well and Strong Now owing to the curative value of

Warner's Safe Cure

So writes Mr. J. B. Adams, 31 N. 57th St., Philadelphia, Pa.: "In the early part of 1892 I was a wreck, and I found I was running into Bright's Disease. I began to take Warner's Safe Cure. I had a terribly hard fight and was not able to work much of the time for three years. I must have taken over one hundred and fifty bottles by the time I could work at all steadily, but your remedy saved my life—I am positive of that. Since then, when I take cold or feel badly, I use Warner's Safe Cure with excellent results."

Warner's Safe Cure has been before the public for many years and has to its credit the cure of thousands of cases of Bright's Disease. An army of men and women, of all ages, are to-day living who would be in their graves had they not taken Warner's Safe Cure.

When the kidneys are disorganized, and their structure, including the little delicate tubules, are breaking down; when the face is puffed with a pale, marblelike appearance and the whole body is dropsical, Warner's Safe Cure will remedy the trouble and bring health where death would be inevitable. Warner's Safe Cure is put up in 50-cent and $1.00 sizes and sold by druggists everywhere.

Warner's Safe Pills, for constipation and biliousness, purely vegetable, absolutely free from injurious substances, are a perfect laxative. They do not gripe or leave any bad after effects. 25 cents a package.

To convince every sufferer from disease of the kidneys and liver that WARNER'S SAFE CURE will absolutely cure, a sample bottle and also a sample box of Warner's Safe Pills will be sent FREE OF CHARGE, postpaid, to any one who will write to WARNER'S SAFE CURE CO., Rochester, N. Y., and mention having seen this liberal offer in the Boston American.

CHAMPLAIN MEMORIAL TO BE A LIGHTHOUSE

BURLINGTON, Vt., Oct. 6.—At a meeting of the members of the memorial committees of the Lake Champlain Tercentenary Commission of the States of New York and Vermont, it was decided to make the $75,000 permanent memorial to Samuel de Champlain a lighthouse instead of a colossal statue of the discoverer, as had been proposed. HOKE SMITH SURELY DID COME BACK

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 6.—Hoke Smith has been elected to serve a second term as Governor of Georgia. Incomplete returns indicate that Governor Joseph M. Brown, who was defeated for the gubernatorial nomination in the August Democratic primary, and whose name was placed before the voters as an independent Democratic candidate, probably received a majority of votes cast in two of the twenty-four counties of the State. All the regular Democratic nominees for State and county offices were elected, the vote for the social ticket being inconsequential.

BIG NAVAL CRANE SINKS IN HARBOR

A seventy-five-ton crane sunk at its dock at the Charlestown Navy Yard just as extensive repairs had been completed preparatory to placing the crane in commission. The huge lifter was hoisted to the New York yard for a time. On its return trip to Charlestown it ran into bad weather and had to be practically rebuilt as a result of the battering of the seas.

Workmen finished the job on the crane after many weeks' work, and while they were at dinner the whole machine, with its barge, sank to the bottom of the slip.

MILLINER MUST PAY HER TAILOR

Mrs. Bessie G. Shipman, milliner, of No. 5 Upland road, Cambridge, has been ordered by Judge Bennett in the fourth session of the Municipal Court to pay to W. Paris, a ladies' tailor, $81, with interest from February, 1910, and costs of court. The amount was in payment for making and altering a Spring gown which Mrs. Shipman refused to accept last Spring. The case was one of many features, an interesting one being the refusal of Mrs. Shipman to try on the suit at the request of the court.

PALMER CONFRONTED BY WATER FAMINE

PALMER, Oct. 6.—With two of the three reservoirs which furnish the town's water supply already dry and the third falling at the rate of six inches a day, Palmer today is facing a water famine. Action has already been taken both by the Board of Health and the prudential committee of the fire district looking toward some relief. The prudential committee declares that if conditions continue the supply cannot last more than a week, and the town is now helpless in case of a serious fire.

DRAPER AND FROTHINGHAM ARE RENOMINATED BY REPUBLICANS

PROGRAM GOES THROUGH WITHOUT HITCH, INCLUDING THE PLATFORM.

Governor Draper, Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham and the rest of the old Republican State ticket, with the exception of Attorney-General Malone, were renominated. District Attorney Jason M. Swift of East Middlesex will have Malone's place, and the Republican State convention had adjourned to-day before the Democrats in Faneuil Hall had fairly begun their convention. The Republicans got under way a few minutes before 11 o'clock, and Tremont Temple, where they held forth, was empty a little more than two hours later.

The platform was accepted without a dissenting vote as presented by the committee on Resolutions. The Walker tariff plank was included. Congressman Butler Ames, who had threatened earlier in the day to make a row in case the platform eliminated that Senator Lodge ought to be renominated, was satisfied with the platform after he heard it read. Norman H. White of Brookline, who was expected to say something about the platform's indorsement of the Governor's railroad policies, was not in evidence.

Just Like Clockwork.

The convention moved like clock work barring the failure of Secretary John A. Curtin of the State Committee to show up in time to read the committee's call and Temporary Chairman Hadley's mistake in announcing that "the convention will now be turned over to the permanent organization before the permanent organization had even been nominated. In Curtin's absence the convention call was read by Charles S. Groves, the assistant secretary. Hadley's slip-up was hailed over with the aid of a cough from Senator Lodge and a nudge from Secretary Groves.

The convention was built enthusiastically. It applauded Hadley's name, cheered up and shouted for Taft and Draper, and almost stood on its head for Lodge and Crane. Lodge acknowledged the ovation to himself by rising and bowing. Crane sat like a sphinx until Lodge pushed him to his feet.

The address of Attorney Representative Robert Luce of Somerville, permanent chairman of the convention, was the most interesting feature of the gathering. The reading of the platform, and by a couple more, went through as a matter of course, although it contained some surprising planks for a Republican platform.

Oratory from Luce.

Luce's speech consumed about an hour. Like his once clothes as a speaker. If he was he was brought the audience to its feet for Taft, Draper, Lodge and Crane. His mentions of "our Democratic friends" provoked considerable laughter.

Luce hinted that the Democrat at one time

> There were no more than fifty women in the gathering, and all of these were in the upper gallery. The wives, daughters and party of women friends sat in the north gallery close to the stage. On the platform, with Hadley, sat State Treasurer Stevens, Senate President Treadway, Speaker Walker, Secretary Cooper, Lodge, Chairman Hemenway, Chairman Luce, Judge Dubuque of the Land Court, who offered prayer, Senator Guiney, Elliott, Congressman Ames, Attorney-General Lawrence, General Champlin, Congressman Greene, Gardner and Elliott, James M. Swift, District Attorney-General Pelletier, former Governor John D. Long and Colonel Gilson of Somerville.

Congressman Ames was busy running from the stage to the platform to shake hands with friends. Lodge watched him closely. The two did not exchange a word, although at one time they sat only four chairs apart.

Urges Hard Work.

It was evident that all of the speakers sought to give their hearers a hopeful feeling as to the situation in Massachusetts. Chairman Hadley, in opening the convention, advised "the utmost effort" in getting out the Republican vote this Fall. He reminded the convention that 180,000 voters failed to go to the polls last November, that this was about thirty per cent. of the voting population of the State, and that about eighty per cent. of this 180,000 were Republicans.

Former Governor John D. Long, in nominating State Treasurer Stevens, told the convention that "Stevens in all were born in the same State." It remains to tell you the name of that State. Most of the gathering seemed to know that Maine was Long's and Stevens's birthplace, however, and there was considerable laughter.

The statement by Chairman Luce, "May we on occasion be represented by Senator Lodge," caused an unpleasant silence for about three seconds. Luce himself after he had finished the statement. Almost everybody on the platform and in the audience recognized that the witticism fell flat. But Lodge, Luce and others on the platform, barring Ames, also broke loose into applause and cheers.

Mr. Luce's Speech.

In his speech Chairman Robert Luce said that there are no vital issues in this campaign and the dispute between parties to-day was not over principles but as to methods. The increased cost of living is universal and not confined to the United States, and this country is standing the time when it must import food for itself.

We may temporarily, he said, only by returning to those habits of thrift and economy which were characteristic of have thrown away. The salvation of so far as it lies in the hands of statutes, he said, both parties were split on tariff questions, but they lived and not in the principles that Pregnant tariff reviser Aldrich, Hamlin, Gaston, Foss and Thayer to equality at least in this, Republicans want a system of taxation that will be based on facts as to differences in cost of production; Democrats want no consideration of facts in their plan; business men want the tariff taken out of politics; and control of trusts is of more importance than the tariff; Democrats have no constructive plan; they denounce the existing; real progress in the control of corporations has been wholly Republican.

Calls for Square Deal.

He added:

"We are not opposed to mere magnitude of enterprise, as the Democrats appear to be. We seek only the square deal for both capitalist and consumer. We shall keep on our work until we have brought about those conditions. We shall insist that we shall not stop until we have established the proposition that every corporation dealing with the public has the protection of life, whether in the way of personal transportation, or communication, food, clothing or anything else, shall be carried on subject to the public, and shall be required to give to the public that control and watching of its transactions which is the chief safeguard for all beneficiaries. Complete publicity is the most nearly adequate remedy for the evils of the big corporations and combinations. Public audit and then publicity is the next step. Every exact and full knowledge of all the facts publicly and with the best."

Former Governor Long did not appear for the first time before the public and he place to introduce Governor Draper in nominating him. He was received enthusiastically. He said:

Ex-Governor Guild's Address.

It is my high privilege to perform a very pleasant duty. There can be no greater pleasure than to testify in behalf of a beloved loyal and devoted friend. I have no right, however, to ask you the time for the purpose of a Republican convention even to exploit the ties of private friendship. I am here to nominate for Governor the gentleman whom I shall name, not merely because in private life he possesses the qualities that command esteem and affection, but because in public life as Governor and as Lieutenant-Governor he has shown himself a living example of both the titles he has borne. His Excellency and His Honor

"The present Governor of Massachusetts has shown himself yet unworthy of the mantle of leadership of a Winthrop or of an Adams. His clear, intelligent mastery of industrial organization has set him loose splendidly in order. The business of the Commonwealth has never been better conducted.

"I ask the renomination by acclamation for Governor of the loyal friend, the wise leader, the elected public servant, the Republican citizen, Eben Sumner Draper of Hopedale."

In his speech accepting a third nomination Governor Draper said:

Governor Draper's Speech.

I appreciate more than I can tell expression the distinguished honor you have conferred upon me to-day. Any man who has been the successful candidate of the Republican party for two years and receives a nomination by acclamation for a third time has reason to be proud and thankful for the honors conferred upon him, and I am both.

"The Democratic party is to-day holding its State convention in this city to nominate candidates for the various State offices. Just who they will select I do not know, nor do I consider that any concern of mine. Whoever they nominate, I presume, will be champions of the party which nominates them, of the principles of that party, and of the membership of that organization, and the voters must decide whether they prefer them or us.

"I believe the record of the Republican party in this Commonwealth to be better than that of the Democratic party. I believe its principles are more in the interest of the people and that its performance in aid of good government is better than that of our opponents; and I believe the people will so decide.

Stands on His Record.

"I must be and am willing to stand on my record, and believe that past performance is better than present promise. I cannot truthfully promise any better performance for the future than I have rendered in the past, because I have done my best and shall be satisfied with the judgment of the people on the service rendered.

"We have a hard fight before us and it is the duty of those of us who believe that Republican success means good government to do all we honorably can to achieve success. I shall do my best to bring this about, and I ask for your hearty co-operation to that end. If we all take hold and work we shall be successful. The record of our party in State and nation for good and progressive government has never been excelled. Let us see that it is continued and that Massachusetts in the future as in the past maintains the first place among well governed States."

In his acceptance speech, Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham said:

Mr. Frothingham's Address.

This is the third time you have honored me with a nomination to this office. I thank you for the mark of confidence you have done.

It will be the third time we go to victory with our present standard bearer. No more here to-day because we all believe certain principles and certain ideals.

The living man, the man with breath in his nostrils, in times of stress instead of waiting to make possible, moving thereby advance his own ends, will shut petty differences and stand forth loyally behind the standard.

Though we may not agree with every action for which the Republican party is responsible, we can all agree on the party name and essential thing with which the convention is concerned, and that is that Mr. Draper has made an excellent Governor and deserves to be reelected. We can point with pride to the advancements made in legislation during his incumbency of office, and as well expounded in the comprehensive nominating speech of our brilliant Governor.

The Party Platform.

The platform adopted at the Republican State Convention praises the administration of Governor Draper. The Republican party is pledged for a change in the educational system of Massachusetts, which offers children a chance to obtain an industrial education in public schools.

It says Republican legislation aimed to protect the honest farmer who tried to produce milk up to the legal standard and to take elements out of the control of milk contractors so producers could get just and equal rates on small shipments.

The conservation of natural resources is defined as a Republican policy, and the Massachusetts congressional delegation is urged to support the bill for national forest reserves in the Appalachian Mountains. Congressman Weeks is praised as the untiring champion of the measure.

Harbor Improvements.

Attention is called to the improvements projected in Boston harbor and the development of unused land, as well as the creation of a commission to report on the proposed connection of the North and South stations by the Atlantic Avenue elevation of steam roads within this city's limits.

The party is given credit for legislation in regard to inspection, good factory conditions, "proper hours of labor," pure food and other health regulations.

The plank reads:

"We commend the action of the Legislature in passing the resolve declaring that the public good requires a change in the present system of determining the compensation of employes for injuries sustained in industrial accidents, and that the Commonwealth ought to provide different and more suitable relief, and in providing for the drafting of a law after a thorough investigation.

Approves Local Option.

Local option on the direct nominations question is approved of, and so is the law making the Governor directly responsible for all estimates for State appropriations.

The platform says:

"We cannot too warmly commend the administration of President Taft." He is given credit for the national railroad act, the postal savings act, the safety appliance act, the act to get spines to adopt appliances which will prevent accidents and the public land withdrawals act.

The tariff plank reads: "We commend the establishment of a tariff board. We believe, however, that there should be further legislation to define clearly the powers and duties of such board and make it a permanent, independent, expert tariff commission, the function of which shall be to discover and report to Congress from time to time such facts and matters as will enable Congress to amend the tariff law intelligently and scientifically according to the principle of protection.

Changes in the Rules.

"We believe that such changes should be made in the rules of the House of Representatives and of the Senate of the United States as may be necessary to make practicable the immediate revision of the tariff schedule at a time.

"The Payne tariff law has been in operation a little more than a year. An examination of the schedules establishes the fact that it is a downward revision. Generally speaking, it reduces the duties on 654 articles, for the most part necessaries, and increases the duties on 220 articles, for the most part luxuries. Hides were put upon the free list, and the duties on many raw materials, largely grown in New England, were very much reduced.

"The charge that the present tariff is responsible for increases in the prices of necessaries has been demonstrated to be false, both in the report of the United States Tariff Commission, of which Senator Senator from Massachusetts was chairman, and in the report of the Massachusetts Commission on the Cost of Living, of which the presiding officer of this convention was chairman. That no other conclusion could have been reached is evident from the fact that upon all food products the duties have either been reduced or remain unchanged in the Payne bill.

Lodge Is Endorsed.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge is endorsed for reelection in these words: "We recognize the fact that in the framing and passage of the numerous legislation of the last session of congress the Massachusetts Senators had a conspicuous part. Henry Cabot Lodge and Winthrop Murray Crane have ably earned the continued confidence and gratitude by many years of eminent public service."

SULTAN OF SULU OFF, BUT IS COMING BACK

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 6.—The Sultan of Sulu with his retinue of aids and servants sailed away on the United States army transport Sherman for his island empire. He expressed himself as delighted at what he had seen in the United States and said he would make annual visits to this country.

YOU FELLOWS PUT UP A DEMOCRAT LIKE FOSS, HAMLIN, GASTON OR THAYER AND I'LL VOTE FOR HIM MYSELF
UNKNOWN REPUBLICAN STRANGER.
NOW'S YOUR CHANCE, YOU DEMOCRATIC PARTY
UNKNOWN STRANGER.

(Republican; name address not given.)
"You fellows put up a Democrat like Hamlin, or Foss, or Gaston, or Thayer, and Republicans will go to him by tens of thousands. I might flop over, myself."

MUST END GRAFT OR NATION WILL BE BROKEN UP

Unless Republican graft and corruption are removed, this country will be broken into a number of small republics, or possibly a monarchy formed.

The people of the several sovereign states are tired of the financial system imposed by the central government, which deprives them of the control of their own finances, puts money of the country into the hands of a single individual to be moved and distributed as he pleases, and ignores the differences in values which necessarily exist in a country of such vast extent, and of such geographical climatic and agricultural extremes. — Prof. Cady Eaton of Yale.

BANNER DAY OF RACING AT BIG BROCKTON FAIR

BROCKTON FAIR GROUNDS, Oct. 6.—To-day's racing card was the banner event of the meet, and with the weather conditions resembling the middle of June, and the track in perfect condition, over 30,000 people were present when this first race was started, with thousands more pouring in every hour.

The racing started briskly, with every promise of the best day in the history of the fair. The first race was a feature event, the three-year-old trotting futurity stake, and, as expected, the race proved a gift for Chatty Direct. Pullman took the track nicely out in front, and there was never anything else in the race. Director Todd went a capital race and secured the place.

The summary:

WOMAN FINDS A BURGLAR UNDER BED

His smooth tongue saved a young burglar from arrest when Mrs. William J. Bingaard found him under her bed. Mrs. Bingaard lives at No. 20 Columbia street, Cambridgeport. She was sweeping in her bedroom and her broom struck something under her bed, which turned out to be a man. She hauled him out. He was a young fellow of about eighteen, and at once began a hard luck story of how he had come here from Hartford to go to work for the Western Union. She took him into the kitchen and fed him, but he talked too much and she got suspicious, and started to notify the police. Then the burglar took to his heels.

BURGLARY SUSPECTS ARE HELD FOR TRIAL

James M. Smith of No. 107 Draper street and Hugh Perry of No. 96 Chestnut street, Brookline, were held in $1,000 each today in the Dorchester court, charged with breaking and entering into the drug store of Charles H. Davis at the corner of Washington and Ashmont streets, Dorchester. They were caught near the store by Patrolmen Clark and Norton, who were on the trail of the pair who held up and robbed the proprietor of a drug store on Bird street.

FOUR INJURED AS FAST MAIL HITS FREIGHT

Traveling forty miles an hour, the New York mail train "Postal," carrying 200 passengers, crashed into a freight train at Vienna Crossing, a mile west of Sharon Heights Station, early today, and four persons, one of whom was a woman, were seriously hurt.

Several freight cars were smashed. The locomotive and the first mail car of the New York train were also badly damaged.

The "Postal" was made up of five mail cars and two day coaches. The coaches were the rear cars of the train and were crowded with passengers, most of whom were bound for Providence.

Engineer E. Pinkham and Brakeman Louis Cottrell of the freight train were hurled several feet when the crash came and were picked up unconscious. Word was sent to the Sharon Heights depot and several doctors were sent to the scene. The train dispatcher's office at the South Station was also notified, and a special train was hurried to Sharon Heights.

Woman Bruised.

Mrs. Mary Crehan of Attleboro, one of the passengers reported multiple bruises. Thomas Smith of Pawtucket, another passenger, was badly hurt about the head as a result of being thrown against a seat in one of the coaches. Engineer Pinkham suffered a fractured collarbone and multiple bruises of the body. Brakeman Cottrell received several wounds on his face and head, a deep gash over his right eye and multiple bruises on the body. He is the most seriously injured.

Several other passengers cut and cleverly were slightly injured. The most seriously injured were placed aboard the relief train and hurried back to this city and sent to hospitals. Brakeman Cottrell was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital, where surgeons said that, although his injuries are serious, he will probably recover. Engineer Pinkham refused to go to a hospital and was taken to his home, where he is under the care of a doctor.

T. P. O'CONNOR GREAT TRIBUNE OF IRISH PARTY

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

Gifted author, world famed journalist, orator of rare endowment, Thomas Power O'Connor, member of Parliament for a division of the City of Liverpool, is next to Mr. Redmond, the best known of the four envoys now in America in the interest of the cause of Irish Home Rule.

Mr. O'Connor was once described as the great tribune of the modern Irish party. He is just such a man on the platform, speaking to thousands of people, as Daniel O'Connell must have been in his day; massive in physical stature, great voiced, charged with withering invective when he is tearing the opposition to tatters, and blessed with a sense of humor and a warmth and simplicities of heart which sweep all before them, carrying tears or laughter in the faces of his hearers as the allusion of the moment demanded.

T. P. O'Connor was one of Parnell's earliest adherents among the ablest. He had just begun to blaze his way to fortune and fame in literature as "Life of Beaconsfield" had come out and had captured the reviewers when his young ardor was fired with enthusiasm for Parnell's crusade, and under its banner he enlisted.

He was chosen member for Galway, and when he entered the House of Commons it was to fight side by side with Parnell, Redmond, Biggar, Dillon, Gray, Sexton, O'Donnell and twenty others, who were then engaged in the greatest parliamentary battle of the nineteenth century. He has been fighting in the cause of Ireland ever since.

And no man of his time has done more by writing and by speech to advance the cause in the interest of which he is now, as an envoy, visiting the United States and Canada.

O'Connor spoke the other night in Toronto. Sitting beside him was Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the great statesman of Canada, who has repeatedly spoken, both in Canada and England, as a strong supporter of home rule. Next day T. P. O'Connor said to a reporter of the Toronto Journal and the leading editors of the Canadian press:

The AMERICAN is the Great Home Paper.

Lingham and was driven by the chauffeur. The collision occurred on Hutton street.

Boston central branch and Boston central council of the United Irish League will hold a meeting of the American House this evening at 8 o'clock to make plans for the reception of the Irish envoys, Hon. Augustine J. Duffy will preside.

COURT DENIES PECK'S DEMAND OF MISS QUINN

Professor Harry Thurston Peck of Columbia University, who is being sued for $50,000 by Miss Rollin Quinn of Cambridge for alleged breach of promise, has lost one point in his defense in the action of Miss Quinn.

Justice Gaynor in the New York Supreme Court last Saturday denied a decision denying the application of Professor Peck for an order requiring Miss Quinn to furnish him with a bill of particulars in her suit. The plaintiff has been announced to appear for examination next Monday.

Professor Peck demanded that Miss Quinn name the exact time of the proposed marriage, which she claims he made. He denies such a promise ever was entered into and charges that Miss Quinn cannot recall any date since he called her to become his wife.

As a result of the notoriety which Miss Quinn's suit has brought upon Professor Peck, his resignation from the faculty of Columbia was requested by President Butler. Later he was presented with the formality of voluntary resignation. He refuses to leave his chair at the university, however, claiming that he is the victim of persecution.

TWO LEOMINSTER STORES ROBBED

LEOMINSTER, Oct. 6.—Golden's pharmacy and G. F. Pierce's furniture store were entered early today by prying open the back windows. Two candy registers were broken in the pharmacy and $8 taken, and the safe was opened in Pierce's store and $10 taken in cash, with a number of valuable papers. An attempt was made to enter C. A. Lane's dry goods store and E. I. Walker's shoe place, but the thieves were frightened away. The police have several persons under suspicion, but no arrests have been made.

NO CALLS AT NAPLES.

Because of the prevalence of cholera at Naples, Boston bound liners will omit the scheduled calls at that port. The White Star line steamer Canopic, which was to have left Naples yesterday, will remain at Genoa until October 15, when she proceeds direct to this port. Stops at the stricken port will be discontinued until the danger is over.

HARVARD SQUAL HAS HARD DRILL FOR WILLIAMS GAME

BOWLERS IN BIG SUBURBAN LEAGUE OPEN THE SEASON

HARVARD ELEVEN IN FINAL DRILL TO-DAY FOR WILLIAMS GAME

By E. V. B. FARKE.

The varsity and second teams of the Harvard squad are through a hard scrimmage this afternoon in final preparation for the game with Williams on Saturday. The work of the team to-day is open, the men coming out of the temporary confinement of the first three days of the week, having received training in many secret and new-fangled plays which will later be unveiled on to the whole team in an attempt to overwhelm the Crimson in their cement stronghold.

It is expected that Head Coach Percy Haughton will be on hand again to-day to take charge of the men, as he has been absent from the field for the past two days, having been laid up with a slight illness. In the interim Johnny Cutler has taken his place, aided by Coaches Hagler, Burr and Cutting.

Since to-day's practice is open there will not be that sudden covering of helpers, assistant managers and the like in the Stadium to-day when an outsider appears in the form of some one unknown to the watchful minions of the Harvard football team.

Heat Bothers Players.

Owing to the extreme heat on the field yesterday, the work for the varsity was quite light, a fifteen-minute scrimmage being indulged in between the varsity and second teams, the former scoring once, and being held on the one-yard line when a second score seemed certain.

That was the first time that the varsity has been held for downs by the second team this season, but it might be said that the latter team has been greatly strengthened during the past few days and the members of that eleven are playing much better football than is usual at such a number of minutes, and regulars were used during the course of the scrimmage.

"Nothing doing," was the word when an injury to his leg in one of the scrimmages the latter part of last week, was sent on the field by cutting's clothes, while Corbett, whose hand is still done up in a bandage, fitted about in a tennis suit, getting what exercise he possibly could under such circumstances, to keep in trim.

Howard Johnson, the versatile quarterback on the varsity, it was learned today, badly injured his ankle in practice day, badly injured his ankle in practice day, but the first thought to be merely a slight sprain. It has developed, however, that that one of the small bones had been broken, and a special contrivance will be made to support the injured leg that will permit him to continue with his work. Wrightsworth, the regular quarter, was also out being given a rest, as the two remaining quarters, Gardner and Bolte, took turns in running the team.

The most preliminary drill was given the men. March time is now being spent daily in training the men in the fundamentals of their respective positions, such as the technique of charging and breaking through and blocking for the fleetmen, and driving in and breaking up plays for the opposing all of which play their part and part when the men get into actual contact.

Varsity and Subs Line-up.

Following this, the varsity and their subs lined up against each other and had a little dress rehearsal, running slowly through their plays, and receiving instruction in certain formations and the correct positions of each player.

The short scrimmage between the varsity then followed. Captain Withington received the ball on the kick off on the ten-yard line and picking his holes carefully, with the aid of good interference, carried the ball back thirty yards, Coolidge then showed his speed and excellent side-stepping ability by reeling off fifteen yards on the 40th tackle play on the left side of the line.

Campbell, who is taking Corbett's place, in the latter's absence, followed with a five-yard plunge through the left side of the line, McKay and Minot, opening up a hole through which a cart and horse could have been driven. Several more plays netted the varsity a little over twenty yards on the second's goal, but they lost the ball on a fumble which was recovered.

After several plays, the second team made a miserable fumble, and the varsity recovering the ball, Leslie was sent over for the remaining five yards and a score.

Second Team Holds Varsity.

After much punting of the ball back and forth the second team got the ball on their own fifteen-yard line, and when Callender was unable to punt, owing to McKay and a few other varsity linemen to break through the secondaries as to break through the second's line, the ball went to the varsity. They gained another forward pass, but this failed, and the second team got the ball, but apparently not caring whether the varsity got the ball or not, immediately lost the former gain the varsity the ball after twenty-five yards from the goal line. Grunstein, the speedy little halfback, dashed through the line and wriggled along for a total of fifteen yards. From this point the second team braced perceptibly, and the three downs that they were able to advance the ball only to the twenty-yard line, failing to score and being held for downs for the first time this year by the varsity eleven.

By this time the varsity and their opponents were both worked more and less too much work on such a hot day, and the second team more harm than good, or in brief overtaxing their strength, so the game was called off at this point.

Long, the varsity's leading line-up was the shifting of Parmenter, last year's varsity guard, to center, a position that position this year, to tackle as a substitute for Dan Long, Jr., who is a regular guard and Blodgett is rounding into shape to a high state. Parmenter is probably the most useful as a substitute lineman of any one in practically no one among the men who will be used in the line-up this year can be taken in who shows promise. Parmenter seems to be the find.

Amory Shifted to End.

Another change is that of Amory from centre to end. He also seems to be too light for a regular berth in the line-up, but a tall, rangy, wiry chap, he should prove pretty well at the end of the line. Especially as he is fairly speedy. He has played centre on his freshman team two years, and knows how to get down the field all along the line.

Kane, the giant guard, is showing up well at that position as a substitute to Lockwood, who is not in the game with us yesterday. The former should be a strong tackle for a time, as he is a big chap, but with a little training, for he is still a big green as to varsity methods of playing football, he should greatly strengthen the line, by proving an able substitute.

The backs, who showed up most well in their work yesterday as in previous scrimmages, continue to be Captain Withington, Campbell, Grunstein and Leslie. Each one of these men has proved himself formed with more real headiness than the other two, and those putting them in for both who is the real star of the backfield will no doubt form a fine nucleus of the team formed with this series. The team work of the varsity continues to improve, although it is not expected that it will be seen as good as at others. But it must be remembered, however, that varsity was too hot for football, and the varsity's work at that time should not be taken as a criterion.

AGAIN FAILS TO SWIM TO LIGHT

Miss Annie Moorcroft of Revere made her fourth unsuccessful attempt to swim to Boston light yesterday. She sliced from the Charlestown pier at 11.11 and was taken from the water at 1.45. On her last previous attempt she reached Long Island Head in four hours forty minutes. Miss Moorcroft said that she will try again.

SUBURBAN LEAGUE OPENS ITS SEASON

By ED. COGSWELL.

Get aboard, every bowling log, for tonight the Suburban League is off for a run of thirty three weeks, which means that the season is now in full swing. From what it accomplished last year the Suburban made a grand name for itself, and from all indications this season will at once still further climb to the front.

The officials of the league are F. Sullivan, president; E. A. Cate, secretary; F. Hiner, Jr., treasurer, and Wallace Dunbar, official scorer. The board of arbitration comprises the alley owners in the league.

Home Teams Meet.

For to-night the schedule calls for the two home teams to play against each other, the Dudley bowlers offering a pair of chelsea square alleys, Everett square, Auditorium to Malden, Knight's alleys in Woburn, Broadway in Revere, and the Hyde Park alleys, also at Revere.

The logs will watch with interest the scores made in the opening, in order to compare them with those put up by the greater Boston City League in its first matches last week. The Suburban is the closest rival of the Greater Boston and hopes to be able to chalk up the biggest totals during the season.

The prize list of the Suburban aggregate $293 and is divided in the following manner, planning to give a lot of its bowlers the opportunity of taking home something material outside of having just enjoyed the sport of rolling on one of the teams.

How the Prizes Go.

First prize—Team winning first highest number of points, valued at $60.

Second prize—Team winning second highest number of points, valued at $45.

Third prize—Team winning third highest number of points, valued at $35.

Fourth prize—Team winning fourth highest number of points, valued at $25.

Fifth prize—Team winning fifth highest number of points, valued at $15.

Sixth prize—Team winning sixth highest number of points, $10.

Highest team three string total, valued at $10.

Highest team single string total, valued at $10.

Highest individual average, valued at $10.

Second highest individual average, valued at $7.50.

Third highest individual average, valued at $5.

Fourth highest individual average, valued at $2.50.

Highest individual three string total, valued at $5.

Highest individual single string, valued at $3.

Highest individual average of each team, valued at $4.

No Leagues for Phoelier.

Paul Phoelier, who last season raised so much excitement in local bowling circles by bolting against the best, but was finally beaten by Bill Galway for the championship after one of the stiffest contests ever put up, is engaged at the Dudley alleys.

Paul was laughing around the other room as to whether he was eligible in bowling with the Greater Boston City league, or the Suburban with some of the teams, but found out to his regret that he is ineligible through being an employe of a public alley and in one of the leagues, no owner or employe of an alley is permitted to bowl except with their own team. In this instance, too, but Paul can bowl, being the owner of the alley or his employe.

Being left out in the cold may mean that Paul will go after more matches this season than before. It will seem good to see him and Manager Goodnow on the warpath again. The thing is certain, the one who defeats Phoelier has got to go some, and then some more, in order to gain the honors.

F. Sullivan is turning quite a trick at the Malden alleys, offering a pair of shoes for the winner of his weekly roll-off. In the last engagement of the sort there were twenty-four bowlers that qualified, the five top men being compelled to get a score above 475 for the four-string total.

Furniture League Opens.

Under the most auspicious conditions the Furniture League opens its season to-night at the Adams Square alleys, with twelve teams enrolled in membership. The committee intends making the occasion a gala fete, having secured three orchestras, one for each floor, to entertain its lady friends and invited guests. Refreshments will be served, while the bowling rooms have been decorated with flowers and draperies.

In the league this season the following prominent business firms are represented: Frank Ferdinand, Inc.; John H. Pray Sons Company, Morse Furniture Company, C. E. Osgood Company, Shamrock Furniture Company, Henry W. Clark Company, Atkinson Furniture Company, Grand Rapids Furniture Company, Metropolitan Manufacturing Company, Holmes, Lane Company, W. P. H. Brooks, John A. Dean Company.

The officers of the league this year will be: President, Edward Barnett, Frank Ferdinand, Inc.; vice-president, J. M. Shaughnessy, C. E. Osgood & Co.; treasurer, Victor A. Heath, Frank Ferdinand, Inc.; secretary, Fred T. Flanagan, Morse Furniture Company. With this efficient staff the success of the coming season is assured.

FOOTBALL GAMES WANTED.

The Peqouette football team would like to hear from any 120-pound team in Boston. Would like to have a game for Columbus Day. T. M. Molloy, Watertown.

The Wollaston A. A. has reorganized this season and has several new players in the line-up. Last season the team won the championship of the South Shore, defeating all the best teams in that league. Would like to book games with fast 150-pound teams. Games will be played for Saturdays, October 12 and Thanksgiving Day. Edward Byrne, No. 24 Belford street, Dorchester.

The Maywood A. C. of Roxbury would like to arrange games with 110-pound teams to play on ground Boston. C. A. Thompson, No. 366 E. Eighth street.

"LEFTY" HOLDS BACK CONTRACT SIGNATURE

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—Manager Connie Mack may have some trouble in hitching "Lefty" Russell, the sensational southpaw box artist, to the collar again in his first game as a major leaguer, as the youngster has not signed a proffered contract and has signified his intention of attaching his signature to the same.

Before Russell started to twirl in his debut game he pitched last Saturday, Manager Mack handed him a contract which called for the payment of $2100 for the next season's work on the part of the left-handed recruit. Connie stated in explanation of the amount named that this was a fair salary for a minor league recruit breaking in, and that it called for that sum whether Russell pitched one game during the season or warmed the bench all through the year.

ENGLISH HIGH IN HARD FIGHT TO WIN TITLE

From the showing made by the English High School eleven so far this season it appears as though the wearers of the light and dark blue are in line to give Bridge the battle of its life for the premier honors in the Interscholastic League. At the present the eleven of Somerville bebig a contender for the top honors look rather doubtful, and unless Coach White's charges take a decided brace it will soon be curtains for the Red and Blue football warriors.

When the football season opened English was not conceded a ghost of a chance in the Interscholastic League against such fast teams as Somerville and Bridge. The hopes of the Montgomery street boys were almost entirely centered on the opening of the season when it was announced that the veteran John O'Reilly, the king of the schoolboy coaches, had been transferred to the High.

In Jim Conway, formerly coach at Commerce, English High has obtained an able successor to the ever aggressive O'Reilly. From the showing made by Coach Conway's charges thus far this season it looks as though the hustling Nobleboy will live up to his high record that he made last season at the School of Commerce, where in both football and baseball and basketball teams captured the championship titles in their respective leagues.

English High reached the height of its ambition last Saturday when she forced the strong Boston Preparatory School to play a tie game. This, coming on top of the defeat of Somerville at the hands of Groton by the overwhelming score of 22 to 0, has placed the work of English High at least 100 per cent. Boston Latin were able only to eke out a victory over the same form of the English High School team when the "Latins" defeated the latter's South Boston with only a few strong men in the lineup.

There promises to be gay doings at the Brockton fairgrounds next afternoon, when the High School of Commerce plays its annual football meeting with Brockton High in a four-act matinee. Commerce's Somerville and Brockton has but four members of last year's eleven in the line-up, the majority of the likely looking material on hand in the west end boys' camp. Gray and Bonnell, Somerville's line, which is the weakest in the team, will be missed, but Somerville would be again in the running, for there is no beating that back field, composed of Garland, "Plug" Donne, Parke and Hanscom.

MACDONALD OUTPOINTED.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Carl Healey outpointed Eddie Macdonald in a fast ten-round bout held at the Sharkey A. C. Macdonald caught Healey with a hard clinch on the jaw in the first round, staggering him. Healey came back fresh in the second and had the best of the bout throughout. The young knocked out Charlie Burns in the fifth round of their scheduled six-round bout in the semi-final.

WORLD SERIES ANNOUNCEMENT

AN important announcement relative to the results in the world series baseball games will be found in the Boston Sunday American.

WHITE STRENGTHENS SOMERVILLE'S LINE

Since the crushing defeat at the hands of Groton, Coach White has been working in earnest to get his team in shape for Somerville's line, which is the weakest in the team. The strong Somerville eleven would be again in the running, for there is no beating that back field, composed of Garland, "Plug" Donne, Parke and Hanscom.

BIG BATSMEN NOT ALWAYS BEST HITTERS

The average layman the fan was is unacquainted with the inner and outer conditions of the game, but loves to see it played—one of the natural opinion that a champion batsman, a man with a rare and virile vigor, must be a Hercules, the personification of muscled masculinity. A heavy hitter, the man who drives out the triples and the home runs, so it would logically seem, should be of gigantic sinew, capable of great feats of weight lifting and hammer throwing, and a good all-round player should not even be considered as a batting possibility.

And yet, strange as it may seem, some of the best batters, best knockers of the ball to the ends of the earth, have been men who in appearance were the weaklings of the lot. Take Wagner, for example, or Hans Wagner, is also blessed with an accurate eye and a fighting spirit, but when it comes to batting Hans, but there is nothing about either of these things to say that a player with the strength of Samson making huge swings without the leverage with the ball goes whizzing by, and finally walking pointedly toward the bench without even rolling out a grounder.

Wagner is big man and massively strong. So were Cobb, Crawford, Hans Lobert and many others of the noble slugging tribe of the present day sovereign. But the strength of these giants was guided and controlled by the eye and the brain, the element as to the location of the ball.

In recent years the greatest man was Pete Browning, very tall, but with a skinny body and with no strength in his muscle. Pete Browning could not hit the ball to save his life, known in a wrestling match of forty seconds, but with a pair of worthy batting rival, year after year. The ball would come in only and only to be used to swing on, and smash against it with terrific force, Browning having the ability to concentrate what power he had that he could put into the blow, and without loitering off his bat just as Anson and the other giants whales could bring them.

BIG AUTO CUP ENTRANTS IN BALKY MOOD

NEW YORK, Oct 6.—The little controversy between the Motor Cups Holding Company and the entrants in the Grand Prize race which is scheduled for October 15 over the course where the disastrous Vanderbilt Cup race was held last August, has developed several little skirmishes but no definite action has been taken to postpone the race and it will be held as originally scheduled unless the State authorities interfere.

At a meeting of the contestants in the Hotel Vanderbilt at which Jesse Lynch Is representing the Benz, Howard Marmon, the Marmon, E. R. Hollander the Pullman and W. C. Durant, the Buick team, were present.

A committee consisting of E. R. Hollander and Howard Marmon was appointed to call on Manager Vanderbilt to see if something could not be done to properly police the course and safeguard the drivers and the public.

When asked if the committee had made any demands for the better safeguarding of the course, he said, "No demands were made.

"Were requests made?" he was asked and he said, "No requests were made. He finally admitted that the committee had made some suggestions but declined to say whether they were accepted or not.

Mr Vanderbilt was so much pleased at the exhibition of the Italian driver, Ceirano, a youth's race that he presented him and the Benz team with a check for the entrance fee of $1,500 to Jesse Prentice of the Benz Motor Company.

All that Mr Prentice had to say was that he wanted some guarantee that the drivers and the police would be better protection than it then had in the Vanderbilt Cup race and his suggestions were satisfactory to the committee and Vanderbilt generally.

Mr Prentice said yesterday: "I don't care to discuss the matter at last now but we can rest assured that the steps taken to protect all drivers in the race will be satisfactory to Mr. Vanderbilt and to me."

Automobile racing in all its branches Mr. Vanderbilt also said that he had neither a moral nor a legal right to throw out the race simply because he objected to the extreme recklessness of the way a portion of the race was handled and that he would probably throw out the entries were taken into the courts, as it probably will be.

A Ford car is to be driven by Frank Kulick and a Sharp Arrow to be driven by Louis Strang have been entered for the grand prize race.

Practice for the race was supposed to start today and while Manager Pardington was on hand only one of the cars, that of Washington A. Roebling, Jr., a Roebling Planche car put in an appearance on the course.

RUSSIAN WRESTLER LOSES.

Adolph Lundin, the Swedish champion, added another wrestler to his string of triumphs, when he defeated Sydakoff, the Russian heavyweight, in straight falls at the Columbia. Lundin was forced to work his hardest as the Russian was a wrestler of the most strenuous kind. The first fall was won in twenty-eight minutes and the second in thirteen.

STRAIGHT TIPS FOR SPORT FANS

DURING THE GIANTS-DOVE PARTY the other day, when Buster Brown was pitching with a man on second base, the next Giant up hammered a long one to Brown, who seemed dazed as he picked up the ball in his hand. Marquis McGraw was on the sidelines. He yelled at the top of his voice "Throw it to third baseman," and the docile Mr. Brown did throw to third too late to catch any body, either at third or first. And he didn't see the joke until after when some body told him about it. Off of the bonehead plays. But you see it every day, now.

HAVEN'T HEARD A PEEP FROM Johnny Coulon or Jimmie Walsh about covering that forfeit Tommy Lee left with me to bind a scrap for Frankie Burns with either of those lads at 118 pounds. Straight Tips. To settle an argument, a person puts a bet to go and B goes to go. A bale three and snaked box. It's a game. B bashed the bale with the bat and the wind blows truly.

Why shouldn't B go out? He made his necessary point and A still needed a point to go out after scoring the three. It's so obvious that I can't see why you had an argument. But many a man has fought with his wife over what they'd have for dinner when they couldn't even steal liver from the cat.

WORLD'S SERIES PRICES GO UP

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6—John A. Heydler, secretary-treasurer of the National League, after a talk with other members of the committee having charge of the arrangements for the approaching world's series, announced that the bleacher seats would sell for $1 instead of 50 cents, as was announced at Cincinnati. There will be temporary seats erected in the outfield which will be sold for 50 cents.

In the lower pavilion, seats in the first eight rows will be $3 each and the remainder of the seats will be $2 each. In the upper pavilion the price of seats in the first five rows will be $3 each and $2 for the rest of the stand.

Plans for the allotment of the seats have not yet been completed, but applications for more than double the seating capacity have already been received.

The bleacher seats and the $3 and $2 seats will not be placed on sale until the morning of each game.

With the extra seats in centre field the seating capacity will be about 30,000.

4 UMPIRES AT EACH WORLD SERIES GAME

CHICAGO, Oct 6—Only 6,000 seats at the Chicago National League ball park will be reserved for the world's series games, and no reservations will be made by mail. This decision was reached today by Robert McRoy, who is in charge of the Chicago team and his secretary, Roy Thomas.

President Murphy announced that all four umpires assigned to the world's series will officiate at each game. They will rule behind the ball, and make base decisions and two will officiate in the outfield.

FINE PHILLIES $100 FOR JACKSON DEAL

CINCINNATI, Oct. 6.—The claim of the Shreveport club for $1,500 against the Philadelphia National League Club for W. H. Jackson, has been dismissed by the National baseball commission. The commission holds that the player was on the suspension list, was sold by Shreveport to Philadelphia. For this reason the first-named club could not disclaim. A fine of $25 was imposed upon Shreveport for this violation of the rules. The Philadelphia club was fined $100 for giving the Shreveport club permission to try the player after inquiries had convinced it that Jackson was on the ineligible list.

LUNDIN BEATS THE RUSSIAN, SYDAKOFF

Ivalmar Lundin, the veteran Swedish wrestler, proved that he still is to be reckoned with in the mat game by the scientific way in which he disposed of Sydakoff, a young, strong, and speedy heavyweight from the land of the Czar, at the Columbia last night. The Russian used all the rough house tactics he knew or could think of in an effort to get the Swede's goat, but Lundin stuck to his task and refused to be rattled. He won the first fall from Sydakoff in twenty-eight minutes with a crotch hold and half nelson, and landed his man on his shoulders for the second fall and the match in eleven minutes with a head over shoulder hold. THE END OF SUMMER

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

THE birds laugh loud and long together
When Fashion's followers speed away
At the first cool breath of the Autumn weather:
"Why, this is the time," cry the birds, "to stay!"
When the deep, calm sea and the deep sky over
Both look their passion through sun-kissed space,
As a blue-eyed maid and her blue-eyed lover
Might each gaze into the other's face.

Oh, this is the time when careful spying
Discovers the secrets Nature knows
You find when the butterflies plan for flying
(Before the thrush or the blackbird goes).
You see some day by the water's edges
A brilliant border of red and black.
And then off over the hills and hedges
It flutters away on the Summer's track.

The shy little sumacs, in lonely places,
Bowed all Summer with dust and heat,
Like clean-clad children, with rain-washed faces,
Are dressed in scarlet from head to feet.
And never a flower had the boastful Summer,
Of all the blossoms that decked her sod,
So royal-hued as that later comer,
The purple chum of the golden rod.

Some chill, gray dawn you note with grieving
That the King of Autumn is on his way:
You see with a sorrowful, slow believing.
How the wanton woods have gone astray:
They wear the stain of bold caresses,
Of riotous revels with Old King Frost;
They dazzle all eyes with their gorgeous dresses.
Nor care that their green young leaves are lost.

A wet wind blows from the East one morning.
The wood's gay garments look draggled out:
You hear a sound and your heart takes warning—
The birds are planning their Winter route.
They wheel and settle and scold and wrangle,
Their tempers are ruffled, their voices loud:
When whirr—and away, in a feathered tangle,
To fade in the South like a passing cloud

[illegible]

A songless wood, stripped bare of glory;
A sodden moor that is black and brown:
The year has finished its last love story—
Oh, let us away to the gay, bright town

Daysey Mayme Appleton

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

WHEN the Lysander John Appleton family moved to New York it was with the firm determination on the part of Mrs. Appleton and Daysey Mayme to follow up the careering advice to women found in the magazines the papers and same fresh from the press and this explains why an article by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in which she advised women to burn their love letters, caused quite a panic in the Appleton home.

We must do it, said Mrs. Appleton with a resolute sigh. It seems cruel to destroy the memories of [illegible] but we must, she could make her husband write more [illegible] as it was he never mother looked for inspiration.

YOU CUR!
STACK ARMS MEN!
I'LL DIRECT THE BATTLE FROM HERE, FORWARD MY BRAVE COMRADES!
IT ISN'T TIME FOR LAMP FIRES YET, DESMOND. YOU'LL BE SUSPENDED FROM THE LODGE FOR THIS!
GRANDMOTHER
MY CLAUDE WILL BE ROOSTED TO DEATH!
I'LL SHOW DESMOND THAT I AM A SOLDIER AND WILL NOT SURRENDER THIS POSITION
IT WAS ONLY A RUSE TO STEAL MY SWEETHEART
YOU ARE IN MY POWER, ROSAMOND. I DEFY YOU TO FOLLOW, FOR SOLDIER FRIEND TO FOLLOW, HA HA HA

This battle is no sham, so far as Claude and Desmond are concerned. It's the real thing, and it looks as though Desmond has a little the best of it. If Claude doesn't watch out, he'll tear his pretty clothes on those bayonets.

Claude is a military genius, and no mistake. He knows how to give the right order at the right time. And that's a good thing to know, if anybody should ask you. Lots of people don't know any better than to order oysters in July.

Doesn't Claude look like a real general, though? After the commanding gesture? If his was a real battle, he'd have the enemy on the run in no time. He may be Desmond, but he's there with the front.

However, desperate Desmond still has a trick or two up his sleeve. There's one thing about him—he never lets the rules of the game interfere with his private plans. He makes his own rules as he goes along.

What's Rosamond hollering about? Is she afraid Claude is being burned at the stake, or is she worrying because the dear old thinks of Claude are bidding his handsome face? Kind reader, you have two guesses, but keep your eye on Desmond.

There, we just knew that villain was up to some deviltry. He's kidnaped Rosamond again! But wait until Claude gets the smoke out of his eyes! Then you'll see what he'll do to Desmond. That, however, will be in the next picture.

THE LAUGHING SATYR

The Story of a Studio Murder Mystery, from "The Veil of Clay," by Meta Simmins

(Copyright in America by London Daily Mail, 1910)

SYNOPSIS

RICHARD JARDINE, a London sculptor, on his way to his Watergate street studio one morning, saves Beatrice Chalters from throwing herself into the Thames river. He endeavors to help her, and takes her to his studio, where he intends placing her under the care of his housekeeper.

When they reach the studio Jardine is called to the floor below. Beatrice hears a cry of hate and one of pain in the next room. She enters and discovers on the floor the body of Lewis Stuvessant, the man who has persecuted her with his attentions when she was a companion for his mother in the London house. Stuvessant has been stabbed to the heart and a bloody sculpel lying on the floor near the body. As she picks this up Jardine enters the room.

Jardine thinks Beatrice has killed her persecutor, who drove her almost to suicide, and hides the body in the clay statue, "The Laughing Satyr," on which he is working.

Mrs. Stuvessant, the mother of the dead man, and a distant cousin of Jardine, comes to the studio seeking her son—as does also Jardine's elderly Constance Knowles, who is engaged to marry Stuvessant. Dominic Fleury, a friend of the sculptor and the dead man, had called shortly after the murder, and Jardine told him Stuvessant had left the place.

"The Laughing Satyr" grins down on Jardine until he can stand it no longer and, breaking the mask of clay to remove the body, he finds that it has been removed. He sees a story in the paper of a body recovered from the Thames and goes to the morgue to identify it. Mrs. Stuvessant and his sister meet him there and identify the body. A beautiful girl of the streets also identifies it as that of "her Jim," and when it is buried by the stricken mother she makes a scene at the grave.

A dumbbell has been found weighing down the body. When Jardine returns from the funeral he is thinking about the familiar look of the dumbbell till is wondering where he has seen it before.

FIFTH INSTALMENT

JARDINE let himself in with his latchkey.

His step was slow and heavy as he mounted the staircase; he did not glance towards the door of the lower flat as he passed it; for the moment Beatrice Chalters was hardly in his thoughts. It was Constance who was uppermost there, Constance and the other woman who had with so strange an insistence claimed the dead man for her own.

He felt a coward when Constance was concerned; she had asked him to drive home with her from the concert and he had shirked the duty, for it had been a duty. The vision of her face, white and pale-drawn, with eyes that held something of a child's astonished wonder at the mystery of pain, rose up before him now against the gray twilight of the staircase.

He had pretended not to hear her when spoken "quick, I'm afraid," as he closed the door to the brougham. But it echoed in his heart still. He was afraid afraid of fear. It was fear that had tempted him refusal—he had not dared to trust himself alone again with Constance; he dared not test his power of self-control any further.

A Message to Beatrice

His thoughts sild back for a moment to Beatrice.

He had not seen the girl for a couple of days. He had made excuse after excuse for his failure to keep the tacit tryst his time had become, for he had dreaded to meet her questioning eyes while the ordeal of the inquest hung over his head. But to-day he must meet her; he had sent a message through Mrs. Meiklejohn promising not to fail to visit her at tea time.

That was one reason, perhaps, why he had hurried home, but it was not the only, the paramount, reason. Ever since that morning when on the Coroner's table he had seen for the first time the leaden dumbbell that had been taken from the pocket of the light overcoat worn by the dead man in question had been hauntingly insistently against the door of his mind.

Had he ever seen it before?

He had refused to answer this question in his thoughts—refused so far as he could such a refusal to himself—but for all his efforts, again and again, the memory had started up in his mind of just such an old-fashioned, cumbersome, leaden thing with its frayed leather handgrip. It was to verify or refute that memory that he had hurried home.

He went through the room that had been allotted to him as a bedroom since Beatrice and Mrs. Meiklejohn had entered into possession of his flat downstairs, and changed quickly into an old lounge suit; he dreaded lest Beatrice should even catch sight of him in the unusual dark garments of overalls he had assumed so unwillingly in deference to the convention he loathed and despised.

He went downstairs quickly. He could not, his mind before he met Beatrice again—he must know the worst. If there was a worst, to know—make certain. If anything was missing from that dumbbell board that opened out of the sitting room downstairs.

The deserted sitting room had a dreary, dismantled look; Mrs. Meiklejohn appeared to have paid it only the most perfunctory attention during the last few weeks. The air was close and stale with the ghostly breath of many dead pipes; it even seemed to Jardine that a fragrance of Stuvessant's heavy Egyptian cigarettes lingered there still.

He went over to the window hastily and flung it open.

With an effort he turned back and went across to the cupboard and pulled the door open.

An odd accumulation of lumber filled it; a portable sample's trunk gathered together during his six years' tenancy of the place; old pictures and broken plaster casts shouldering seldom disturbed gun cases and golf sticks; fishing tackle. Some sort of instinct seemed to guide Jardine to the dark corner underneath the shelves at the very back of the place, where the things he sought had lain on thought of ever since he had rented the flat.

There were several pairs of dumbbells, he remembered vaguely; a couple he had brought with him from his old home, an oddly shaped pair that were relics of his student days at Heidelberg, as well as some more modern developers that were the necessary of a spasmodic participation in a craze for physical culture that had swept the country a couple of years back.

He struck a match, and fumbling, drew a whole team of them forward into the light on the floor of the cupboard, with his foot. They stood staring down at the huddled mass, the match flaring out unheeded in his fingers.

The Odd Dumb-bell.

There were five dumb-bells there on the floor of the cupboard; two complete pairs, and one single one. This he stooped and picked up. Even in the dim light of the cupboard he knew beyond all manner of doubt that the memory that had obsessed him all that day had not played him false. The weight of the thing, he held in his hand alone seemed to tell him all he wished to know. Even in the dim light the unusual length of the thing, the frayed leather round the handgrip, made doubt impossible. In his hand he held the companion to that dumb-bell he had seen that morning on the table in the coroner's room at River Row; the dumb-bell that had served to keep the dead body of Lewis Stuvessant prisoner beneath the waters of the Thames for nearly three weeks.

But because he wished supremely to doubt the evidence of his senses, Jardine carried the thing he held into the sitting-room and up to the window, that he might examine it more minutely.

The light was beginning to fell a little, but he had read the numerals stamped on the lead easily enough. It was beyond a doubt the fellow dumb-bell to the one found on Stuvessant's body.

The hands that had assisted the body of Lewis Stuvessant out of his secret hiding place, taking away unperceived the clay that had been walled up by clay, had taken into half-forgotten possession of Richard Jardine's with him also.

With an absolutely sickening sense of dizziness at his heart, Jardine turned back from the window and paced the room. Then he stopped dead. In the doorway, her wide, horror filled eyes fixed not on him, but on the damning thing he held in his hand, stood Constance Knowles.

There was a long moment of silence. Then slowly the woman's eyes traveled from his hands to his face.

"Am I His Keeper?"

"What is that in your hand?" she demanded abruptly. Her voice was very low, but it came clearly to Jardine across the room, carrying to him something that was so like an accusation in its tone that he was conscious of a little creeping horror running over his nerves. "What are you trying to hide from me?"

"Hide!" He spoke with a perceptible effort. "Why should I try to hide anything from you, Constance?"

He laid the thing down on the central table; he was afraid to hold it out to her lest she might see how his hand quivered and trembled.

She turned on him with a sudden gust of anger, out of her white face her eyes burned with a sudden, smouldering passion.

"Why? Why? I'll put another question to you, Richard. Why do you always answer my questions with another? Why do you never give me a straightforward answer? Upstairs in that room where Lewis was last seen alive, when I asked you what had happened to him, you answered in Cain's words, 'Am I his keeper?' Her voice rose shrilly. "I ask you again now the same question, in other words. How did my poor Lewis go to his death? You know. You know—there lies the proof of your knowledge?"

She paused with a shaking hand to the dumb-bell on the table.

Jardine started back.

"Constance—are you mad? Upon my word, I think your grief has turned your brain. Because you see me with this in my hand, goodness knows to what conclusions you have jumped." He gave a short, jerky laugh that fell into the silence of the room with a forced unnatural sound. "How many duplicates of this thing exist in London alone, should you imagine, Connie?" he asked.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCKS DROP, AND THEN JUMP

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Standard railroad and low priced industrials were the leading stocks in a strong and active opening of the stock market to-day. Canadian Pacific was the leader of the railroads, quoting a gain of over one and a half points on expectation of an early and higher dividend. Gains ranging from a fraction to a point and over were quoted in almost every stock traded in. There was some covering, but this had no material effect. After the first twenty minutes of trading there was a slight reaction and many of the stocks quoting gains at the opening began to move downward. The losses were quickly wiped out, however, and the market again became steady.

American Sugar led the industrials with a gain of one and a quarter points. Other industrials in which substantial gains were Utah Copper, Consolidated Gas and Union Pacific.

Smelters, American Car and Foundry, Linseed and American Cotton Oil were the leaders among the low priced industrials. Steel was firmer in the absence of a pool. Preferred stocks in the hands for copper was heavier. Bonds were strong; sales (par value), $1,600,000.

Despite the non-committal tone evidenced, caused by the holiday in three cities, American stocks on the London Exchange were quoting gains at the opening, in spite of a point in almost every stock. The markets were strong and American issues were freely dealt in.

LIFT DUTY FROM RACING AIRCRAFT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—The customs regulations must be kept abreast of the times, so the Treasury Department made a ruling on aeroplanes, balloons and other aircraft. Hereafter when the air craft are brought to America for exhibition or racing purposes they will be admitted free of duty under a bond for three months, or have been granted in the cases of racing automobiles.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The two most prominent bull arguments at this time are the fine crop conditions and ideal weather and the demand for high grade bonds on the part of investors.

$ $ $

People are not so afraid of stocks as they were, as is shown by the broadening of the general market. What is more they are disposed to hang on for the long pull, and this is a guarantee against fright in some bad news of importance coming along.

$ $ $

Not long since shrewd observers in the street were hopeful because everybody was touched. Now they are inclined to be somewhat skeptical for the reason that the great majority is bullish. If there is too much confidence the big people may sell out and await an opportunity to get in cheaper.

$ $ $

A reaction was due even if the market is going higher. The only thing that makes the reaction seem more important than it should is that it comes at a time when the market halted twice before since the break of July. Every time it has come around 70 and Union Pacific near 170 there is an unlimited supply of stock for sale.

$ $ $

Further investigation made proves that there really has been considerable hoarding of stocks and bonds by the public in the last few days. This means that many small investors and any reaction will be a source of disappointment to them. Now they fear the public will be scared out of the market.

$ $ $

The Morgan people seem to have embarked on a campaign designed to distribute some Erie securities. Erie has been doing much better in the last few months, but a comparison of Erie's gains with the shrinkage of business done by the Reading Coal Company, forces one to ask which of the Reading company is conserving its coal to let Erie have a chance. Such philanthropy as this has been known among railroads.

$ $ $

A new business philanthropist has been put into actual practice among the copper companies. Amalgamated announced that it had produced only 22 million pounds of metal in September, whereas its normal output is 37,000,000 pounds. All the Hill brothers and sisters in the corporation world are helping one another, and the low copper producers are helping their big brother, sister, bogey man or whatever Amalgamated really is.

$ $ $

Merchants are finding it difficult to get all the money they want and the banks are adopting a very cautious policy in lending. The condition of many railroads is such that the big institutions will have to exercise unusual care this year, which is one reason that no big speculation will be tolerated in the stock market. The seller of stocks the last few days has been very largely for the account of banks or for men directly interested in the money situation. Pool enthusiasm has been chilled and if it persists it will get more chills and maybe some Aldrich money.

$ $ $

The Reading rally, it has been proved, was based on maliciously false information. The directors have no idea of making any distribution or even of advancing the dividend rate for a year, regardless of what the courts may decide in the meantime. Of course, if the courts order a distribution of assets, that will be another matter. The Standard Oil people have an intention of doing anything of importance until the Supreme Court of the United States hands down its decision, and that cannot be rendered until next Spring at the earliest.

STRONG CARDS AT THEATRES

"The Dawn of a Tomorrow" at the Shubert Theatre is one of the real dramatic treats of the season.

"Love Among the Lions" is on its last week at the Hollis, and will be followed next Monday by "The Lily."

Frank Fogarty and his Irish stories are creating laughter at B. F. Keith's theatre.

"Girlies," with its famous chorus, is providing merry entertainment at the Boston.

Only four more performances of "The Call" at the Globe theatre, then the dramatic drama, "Aunte Laurie."

"The Thief," now playing at the Grand Opera House, will be followed next week by Barney Gilmore.

The Brigadiers" are the burlesquers that are filling good time at the Columbia.

Marie Dore continues her success at the Park Theatre in "Electricity."

"The Fortune Hunter" is playing to prosperity at the Tremont Theatre.

Music and frolic hold sway at the Majestic, where "The Girl and the Drummer" prevails.

"The Crown Prince" is proving a capital attraction at the Castle Square Theatre. It will be followed next week by "Girlies."

Capacity audiences are still the rule at the Colonial Theatre, where "The Arcadians" is playing.

Moving pictures and vaudeville may be found in good quantity at the Hub Theatre.

"The Marathon Girls" are setting the pace in fun and music at the Gaiety Theatre.

Dave Marion and his "Dreamland" burlesquers are providing lively entertainment at the old Howard.

Vaudeville and pictures are the rule at the Scenic Temple.

"The Ginger Girls" are living up to their title at Waldron's Casino Theatre.

"The Chocolate Soldier" has announced as the attraction at the Majestic Theatre, beginning October 17.

Almost everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

END OF HOT WAVE IS DUE THIS EVENING

Boston is sweltering again to-day in a continuance of the mid-summer wave which swept down on the city yesterday. But while to-day promised to be warmer than yesterday, and only a slight change, and cooler weather are predicted for to-night and to-morrow with moderate to brisk westerly winds. After that we shall probably have snappy temperatures and reports of frost from "up country," the weather man says.

Yesterday's highest temperature was 86, the record for October 5. At 10 a. m. to-day the mercury was at 81, and still climbing, while the humidity was also 81, a rise of two per cent. over yesterday. The warm wave came straight across the continent from the Pacific coast.

Seasonable weather also prevails throughout this country and Canada. The temperature is in the thirties in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Nevada. At Sun Francisco it is 60, at New Orleans, 76; at Chicago, 54; at Winnipeg, 28; at Green ville, Me., 62. Rain is falling in Western New York, Pennsylvania and the Ohio Valley. An increasing disturbance in Dakota this afternoon may lead to modify the heat.

SAXONIA DUE TO-NIGHT.

The Saxonia of the Cunard line, delayed by bad weather with 400 cabin and 1,200 third-class passengers, is expected to reach her berth in East Boston about dark to-night, just twelve hours late. The big liner was 400 miles at sea, at noon yesterday. She will probably dock shortly before 8 o'clock.

1,000 FLEE IN PANIC AT BIG CHELSEA FIRE

More than a thousand Jewish residents of Chelsea were thrown into a panic while attending the Scenic Temple on Second street during the celebration of the Jewish New Year, when a fire was discovered in a building near-by.

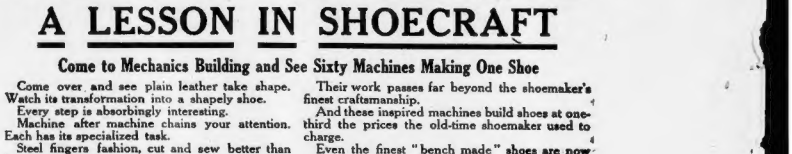
Seventy-five people who live in tenements over the first floor of the building where the fire started rushed to the street in their night clothing, and a repetition of the panic scenes of the big Chelsea fire was only averted by the prompt action of the fire and police departments.

The fire started from some undiscovered cause in a pile of mattresses in the First Furniture Company, owned by Glodblatt & Watkins, which occupies the ground floor of what is called the old Greene block, owned by F. J. Bonner. The building is an old wooden structure, formerly used as a stable. It occupies an entire block, extending from Broadway to Cherry street, and is bounded on the sides by Second street and Everett avenue.

The two upper floors are tenements, and seventy-five persons were asleep when the fire started. Aroused from their slumbers by the noise of the fire wagons, they rushed into the street, many of them without stopping to dress at all, while none stopped long enough to throw on the nearest garments handy.

3 HURT IN TRAIN CRASH.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Harry Leinbeck, freight conductor, and two members of a freight crew, were seriously injured early to-day when a defective switch shunted a freight train on a side track. The cabooses containing the victims was crushed.



A LESSON IN SHOECRAFT

Come to Mechanics Building and See Sixty Machines Making One Shoe

Come over and see plain leather take shape. Watch its transformation into a shapely shoe.

Every step is absorbingly interesting.

Machine after machine chains your attention. Each has its specialized task.

Steel fingers fashion, cut and sew better than human fingers.

Their work passes far beyond the shoemaker's finest craftsmanship.

And these inspired machines build shoes at one-third the prices the old-time shoemaker used to charge.

Even the finest "bench made" shoes are now made better on these same machines.

THE "GOODYEAR WELT"

The very shoes you are wearing are most likely "Goodyear Welts." You are wearing them but don't know it.

Because "Goodyear Welt" is not merely the name of a shoe. But it is the name of a process, or method of manufacture.

Taking its name from the special machinery by which this welt is made.

Manufacturers know all about it. That's why all leading shoe factories are equipped with this machinery. We have furnished them the best shoe machinery in the world.

These manufacturers get the very best leathers it is possible to obtain.

And from this they are making "Goodyear Welt" shoes for a hundred million people. Retailers, too, know the "Goodyear Welt." Go into any shoe store in America—practically all the shoes you'll be shown are "Goodyear Welts."

SOMETIMES SHOES GO WRONG

Perhaps sometime you've been disappointed in "Goodyear Welt" shoes. The leather may have developed a crack or defect. Some flaw may have escaped the inspectors at the factory.

And you've probably declared they made better shoes in the olden time.

But you wouldn't go back. You wouldn't wear the crude shoes made or pay the prices, which used to be three times as high as the cost of modern, dressy "Goodyear Welt" shoes.

The manufacturer wants to make good shoes. He tries to get the best leather.

He makes his factory efficient by installing this United Shoe machinery and getting skilled operatives to run it. He gives you grace, comfort, economy and quality in these modern shoes.

WHAT THE "GOODYEAR WELT" MEANS

While you're at the exhibition in Mechanics Building note particularly this feature. The heavy outer sole, the welt and the upper are sewed together on the outside edge of shoe. No seam is left running along the inside edge to bite deep into the comfort of your feet. This particular method of sewing on the outside instead of on the inside is known as the "Goodyear Welt" process. Learn to recognize it. It means comfort and beauty in shoes. Come to this exposition and see how it is done.

The Thing To Remember Is that you can detect the imitation of the "Goodyear Welt" by a "sock" lining. Lift it up at the shank of the shoes. If there are tack points and stitches underneath it, the shoe is not a "Goodyear Welt." If you want the best in construction

Insist on the "Goodyear Welt"

If They Asked You "Will You Have Mince Pie or Tacks?" That Would Sound Strange

It Sounds No Stranger Than "Will You Take Murphy or Roosevelt?"

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal-Examiner

The State of New York is going to have a queer kind of election this Fall, and an interesting election.

The first thing that bobs up to the surface of politics is the question, "Would you rather have Murphy or Roosevelt for boss of the State of New York?"

The Wall Street gentlemen and others who feel that we are in a crisis which requires the noble intellect of safe and sane Murphy assure you that you ought to vote for Murphy's man in order to rebuke Roosevelt, who wants to make himself boss of the greatest State in the Union.

And the gentlemen who feel that Roosevelt is the intellectual earthly source from whom all blessings flow tell you that you ought to do your very best to back up Mr. Roosevelt in order to rebuke Murphy, who presumes to crawl out of his Fourteenth street neighborhood and declare himself boss of the entire State.

Roosevelt or Murphy, which will you have? Rather an interesting question. And the answer in November will be EXCEEDINGLY interesting. We think we know what the answer will be, and we think a majority of our intelligent readers know.

We wonder, by the way, how Mr. Shepard, an intelligent and dignified citizen, feels about Democratic politics in the State of New York. It would be interesting to know what his emotions were while, as candidate for Governor, he sat around "waiting for Murphy to finish his dinner," and wondering what individual Murphy would select for Governor. We understand that Mr. Shepard had recently a poor idea of the direct nominations plan. We wonder whether he hasn't a better idea of that now than he used to have?

We wonder what the people in the upper part of the State of New York think of Mr. Murphy's theory that he is the gentleman to manage them, pick out their candidates, and a little later on lay taxes on their backs in the true Tammany fashion?

If any man up the State who owns a small piece of property or who pays rent in a building which pays taxes thinks that Murphy would make a pretty good boss for the whole State, that individual might well go down to New York City, look about, and ask some questions.

Mr. Murphy's organization is collecting and spending in the neighborhood of two hundred millions of dollars in taxes in New York City. When he gets to be boss of the State as well as of the city—if he ever does—the people in the other cities will learn something about taxation that will surprise them. It will surprise them considerably more than it will please them.

We wonder whether the hopes of the race-track gambling fraternity are to be fulfilled THIS time or smashed to the ground, as they were at the last election, when the race-track Murphy candidate—Chanler—was beaten.

You know, of course, that the gamblers and the bookmakers—many of whom now are actually working, with tears in their eyes, at some honest trade—believe that the election of Dix and the establishment of Murphy as the boss of the State would mean the resumption of public gambling at the race tracks.

How do you personally feel about that? Is it your opinion that the State will select Mr. Murphy's candidate and indorse the theory that public gambling is a good thing?

Politics is a queer business, dear brethren.

You couldn't imagine anything very much queerer than Mr. Murphy, of Tammany Hall, and Theodore Roosevelt, of Oyster Bay and Africa, struggling for the boss-ship of New York.

And you couldn't imagine anything more interesting and amusing than the motives behind the various political wigglings and protestations. For instance, you have the New York Sun, earnestly supporting Murphy for boss of New York State, and Murphy's candidate, because the Sun is bossed by people that hate Roosevelt, and think that they can get what they want from a Murphy more easily than they can from a Roosevelt.

You see the New York World enthusiastic for Murphy and Dix, full of grief and woe at the mere mention of Roosevelt's name. Do you know that the World's sudden fondness for Murphy and Dix is based upon the fact that the World accused Roosevelt and his brother-in-law of shameful transactions, and then got angry when Roosevelt tried to put the owner of the World in jail for libel?

Those that are now betting their money freely on the election of Mr. Dix think they know that he is going to be elected because the Republican State bosses, Barnes and the others, have been kicked down stairs into the cellar by Roosevelt. The upstate Republican bosses have been rapped over the ears by Roosevelt, and so, for revenge, they are going to help the downstate Democratic boss—naturally their enemy and their rival in the fertile valley of graft.

The friends of Roosevelt say that the shock which has already been administered to Barnes, the upstate boss, by Roosevelt, will shortly be administered to Murphy, the downstate boss, by the same individual.

We shall see, and shall all be interested in the decision.

It is a complicated, mixed-up election.

But our readers will sift out the facts and the motives, and we shall try to give them the material on which to base a good, sound, working opinion before the campaign comes to an end.

OBLITERATION POVERTY'S ONLY REMEDY

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

ONE principal reason why our machinery runs with so much friction is that most of us have so little grace and so little imagination as to put ourselves in one another's places.

In the case of any one with whom we disagree most sharply, or toward whom we feel most malevolently, we should, if we were in their place, cherish the same opinion which they cherish and behave exactly as they behave. It is very much to be wished that we could once in a while, and for a little time, exchange personalities with other people; and if, when we were ourselves again, we could retain the character and viewpoint that we had when we were somebody else, our whole attitude toward them would be changed and become one of warmest sympathy.

We are led to this line of thought by reflecting upon two reasons for the bitter feelings cherished by the overworked and hopeless members of the working classes.

One reason is that their position of enforced subordination to the more favored classes seems to them to imply that they are an inferior order of being; in fact, that they are not persons exactly, but a second-rate kind of commodity put into the world for the convenience of those who are better off in point of money and education.

One Man Worth as Much as Another

The time was, a century or two ago, when the depressed strata did not fully realize that they had the same intrinsic value as other people, and they could therefore endure being looked down upon and not keenly resent it.

But that time is past. Men's heads have been lifted up. A man now does not need to have gone to school much, and does not need to have more than a nickel in his pocket to know that he is a human, and that inherently he is as much of an asset as the man from the university or as the employer that he works for and that doles out to him his weekly stipend.

Another reason for his bitterness is his sense of helplessness. He is like a man in a pit, who can look up to where it is light, but cannot climb up to a level with the light; or even like a man sunk into a quicksand, which, the more he struggles to escape, the closer and fiercer the clutch if fastens upon him. To struggle with no expectation that struggle will bring relief is sufficient to fill any heart with despair, not to say exasperation. Now, this sense of helplessness we are very likely to foster by the very efforts we make to furnish relief.

There is a great deal more sentiment in the attempts we make to help the helpless than there is wisdom and sagacity. To give a hungry pauper ten cents that he may get him a cup of coffee is not only a response to his sense of helplessness, but also fosters that sense. After receiving it he is more convinced than he was before that he cannot stand alone, that he cannot take care of himself, that he is in a hole from which there is no such thing as extricating himself.

He probably says that he wants the dime only as a loan and will pay it back. He generally does say that, but he knows he will not, and so do you, and it is only a pathetic attempt to hide from you and from himself the conviction that he is not only moneyless, but that he is hopelessly stricken with the paralysis of pauperism. And after he has put the ten cents into his pocket, or converted it into coffee or beer, he is more desperately convinced of his dependence than he was before.

To give such an one the ten cents may be the only proper thing under certain circumstances, but all the same anything in the way of a pure gratuity rendered to a poor man confirms him in his poverty, fosters in him a sense of helplessness and, consequently, contributes to his helplessness.

Poverty Should Be Destroyed, Not Bettered

It is a way of letting the pauper know that his legs are not strong enough to stand upon, and that his only way of getting through life will be by leaning upon a crutch. There is such a thing as the habit of being poor, and gratuitous bestowal of money and food encourages that habit.

Of course, there are cases where poverty is the outcome of inevitable circumstances and must be gratuitously dealt with, even if it promotes the infirmity we would like to cure. But that still leaves intact the principle that gratuities regularly pauperize.

One of the great purposes of our Christian civilization should be not to relieve poverty, but to destroy it; and to reconcile the burdened, the overworked and indebted to their depressed condition of helplessness, but to be the means of opening up the way by which their discouraged powers shall find room for honest, self-sustained and fruitful exercise.

The Original Camera

By THOMAS TAPPER

I.

YOU possess a wonderful camera. You use this camera every day.

You take pictures with it.

You collect the pictures into a great gallery, and yet you may never have thought to examine its mechanism nor to take care to determine what pictures are worthy of its precious negatives.

The one piece of this camera is the sense of sight, the camera box is the head, the plate is the recording brain cell, the light to which the plate is exposed is your power of desire and attention, and the photographer is the soul within the man that pushes the physical mechanism around as a nurse pushes a perambulator.

How does one take pictures with this camera?

You wander about among men and things. You see something that attracts you. You fix the attention upon it, taking in its details in proportions to your light, and then—click!

You have looked, and now you possess.

Is that the end of it?

When the picture has then been taken does it remain in the camera, or does it disappear?

It has been said that a man drowning, or one in danger of immediate death, "thinks of everything he ever did;" pictures flash upon the mind that have been long forgotten. This helps us to understand what becomes of the picture we have just taken.

After the attention has been fixed and withdrawn the picture may linger for a moment or longer in the conscious mind, but ere long it will give place to another picture, for we are incessantly observing. This means that the picture ceases to occupy the conscious field and has dropped into the memory. As we are constantly performing the process of taking pictures, it is well for us to remember that the "edgting up" process is also constant. This gallery of pictures remains with a man through his lifetime, and unless the brain becomes diseased it remains intact.

II.

WHAT pictures are worth taking? If a man so guides himself that his desire never leads him to point his camera upon unworthy things he will accumulate in his life-time a wonderful gallery of beautiful scenes; or, in other words, he will reach old age with a clean memory.

If, on the other hand, scenes have attracted him which he can photograph only by furtively looking upon them, if he has done a considerable amount of picture taking on the sly, he will gradually take on a smug look outside, while he will possess inside the gallery of pictures which he selected. He may not want this gallery some day later in life. But he has it, nevertheless. He gathered it, by desire, and, like the mark of Cain, it is on him that all men may see.

So this type of photographer reaches old age with a collection of developed negatives he may wish to destroy. But he finds that he owns what he once went looking for. He can give it to nobody else. No one wants it.

There is before him the fearful justice of having what he went out for to find.

The unfailing mechanism of this mental kodak is expressed in the words "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he"; or, "A man's memory is of that to which he has given his attention."

The thinker is the invisible soulman who goes through this life pushing the two-legged camera before him, holding up a gallery chosen on the way, by which the justice that is to come to him will be meted.

Is this fair?

The environment into which you are born offers you everything. You make your choice.

What you select is yours. You have it, and it has you.

A man may walk into a jewelry store and take a watch. If it seems unwise to keep it in his pocket he can toss it over a fence. But if he walks along Broadway and takes pictures, through desire which fails in, say, with the fifth chapter of Matthew, twenty-eighth verse kind, he has them as fast as he has the color of his eyes.

And one day he will be judged by the character of the goods that are found on him.
